Iranians raid two ships in Gulf

54 feared dead in Kharg attack

OSLO, March 21, (Agencies): Fifty-four seamen are feared dead after Iranian planes attacked two Iranian super-tankers on Saturday in Kharg terminal in what may be the worst attack on shipping in the Gulf war, shipping sources said.

Iranian gunboats, meanwhile, attacked a Libanian tanker and a Spanish refrigerator ship near the Strait of Hormuz today.

Aage Holstad, of Singapore-based Viking Management which manages one of the tankers, told Norwegian radio by telephone from the Gulf today that 34 crewmen were missing presumed dead and only four survived Saturday's attack.

Oslo shipping sources, in touch with Norwegians holding financial stakes in the vessels, said dozens of Iranians at the Kharg island oil terminal, where the ships were hit by Iraqi missiles as they prepared to load oil, were killed or injured.

Missing

Both vessels, the 316,739-tonne Avaj and the 253,387-tonne Sanandaj, were still on fire today.

They said a Swedish officer was among the missing and the four who survived were Filipinos. There was no word on the nationality of other casualties or on how badly the Iranian terminal had been damaged, they said.

"I wouldn't think the missing crew are alive now, since they were attacked on Saturday," one shipping source said.

There has been little information and the sources said Iran was unhappy about details of such attacks leaking out.

Oil from Kharg in the northern Gulf is an important source of funds for Iran in its 7-1/2-year-old war with Iraq.

"Tehran is not willing to give out much detail, but they think there is a very slim chance that anyone else survived," said one source in touch with the Gulf.

The report is the first independent confirmation of Iraqi claims that it caused severe damage and casualties in the raid. Both are owned by the National Iranian Tanker Company.

Confirmed

Oslo shipping sources said four crew members had survived from the Sanandaj and 25 were missing. All 29 on board the Avaj were missing.

If the death toll is confirmed, the attack would be the worst on merchant shipping since the tanker war began in earnest in 1984.

Last December, 21 crewmen on the Norwegian-managed tanker Susangard were killed in an Iraqi attack, the biggest confirmed loss of life so far.

A Norwegian Foreign Ministry spokesman said that the missing men were presumed killed. Puntervold said a Swedish engineering officer was among

Stick to truth, Amir tells journalists

EXPRESSING his belief in the freedom of press, HH the Amir has called on journalists to stick to truth while writing.

He also highlighted the role of journalism in the service of the country. He was addressing the newly elected board members of the Kuwait Journalists Association.

The Amir expressed satisfaction and pride over the progress of journalism in Kuwait.

He briefed the members on Kuwait's stand toward the developments in the region.

Fate

"It is Kuwait's fate to be near a war of two neighbouring countries," he said but noted that, "with the cohesion and solidarity of the Kuwaiti people we were able to spare our country the evils and perils, which surround the region."

Kuwait, not being involved in the situation, has won the admiration of many governments, he said, adding that French President Francois Mitterrand once wanted to know how Kuwait avoids involvement though very close to the war.

The Amir said, his reply was: "This is the Kuwaiti people."

The strength of the people is realised through its solidarity and love for their homeland," the Amir added.

Hussein pays tribute to Palestinians

OIC meeting begins with appeal for peace

AMMAN, March 21, (Reuters): Jordan's King Hussein opened an Islamic conference today with a tribute to the Palestinian uprising and appeals for peace in the Gulf and Afghanistan.

He told foreign ministers of the Organisation of Islamic Conference, the Palestinian people had "offered waves of sacrifice in resistance to the forces of injustice and darkness" in three months of protests against Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

"The colonisation policies pursued by Israel are no less perverse than the policy of apartheid practised by the government of South Africa," King Hussein said.

Expression

He said the uprising was "an expression of the will of an entire nation to fight for its freedom and right of self-determination on its own land."

He urged the OIC to back Arab demands for an international Middle East peace conference under UN auspices to be attended by the five permanent Security Council members and the parties involved, including the PLO.

The King called on Iran, which sent a low-level delegation to the OIC conference, to accept a UN Security Council resolution ordering a ceasefire in its war with Iraq.

Pledge

Pirzada welcomed the Soviet pledge to pull its troops out of Afghanistan, but said an interim government acceptable to anti-Soviet Afghan rebels had to be created.

Political sources say Jordan has tried, at Moscow's request, to persuade Pakistan to soften its stand at the Geneva talks.

An Afghan rebel leader at the conference as an observer said yesterday a seven-party guerrilla alliance had formed an interim government and would ask the OIC to recognise it.

Syria snubs Habib

BEIRUT, March 21, (Agencies): The As Safir daily reported that Syria has refused to receive US special envoy Philip Habib during his current Middle East tour to discuss Washington's latest initiative to end the Arab-Israeli conflict.

The daily quoted unnamed Syrian sources as saying President Hafez Al Assad's government accuses Habib of reneging on promises he made during Israel's invasion of Lebanon in 1982.

Habib held talks with King Hussein and senior members of the Jordanian government last night in Amman. No details emerged. Habib left for Saudi Arabia today.

A Jordanian official said before the talks that Jordan

Intruder shot dead

NEW DELHI, March 21, (AP): An intruder was shot to death while scaling a gate outside Parliament, police said today.

Police spokesman Ravi Pawar said the unidentified man was challenged by security guards shortly after midnight. When the man did not heed their calls, the guards opened fire, Pawar said.

A senior police officer investigating the case said the intruder appeared to be a "crank." The officer, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the intruder did not possess a weapon and appeared to be harmless.

Security is tight at Parliament because it is in session and Sikh militants agitating for a separate homeland have threatened to kill Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.

UN meets on PLO mission closure

UNITED NATIONS, March 21, (AP): A US anti-terrorist law orders the closure of the PLO observer mission at the United Nations today. But there will be no eviction notice and the PLO envoys say, "they will have to drag me away."

There will be more international clamour, however, as the UN General Assembly continues to debate the US plans.

Today and tomorrow, the assembly will consider calls by some delegates for the world body to take legal action on behalf of the PLO and to provide alternate accommodations on UN international territory — off limits to US police.

Plans

Some delegates also want to move the next 159-member General Assembly to Geneva in September or shift the special session on disarmament in May and June to Geneva. Those moves, however, are considered unlikely.

The US Justice Department plans to file suit today in Federal Court in New York to force the closure of the mission, a department spokesman said yesterday.

"We're ready to go ahead and file the papers if they don't close the mission voluntarily," said spokesman Patrick Korten.

Widespread violence on day of confrontation

TEL AVIV, March 21, (Agencies): A Palestinian was shot dead in the Gaza Strip today during a "day of fierce confrontation" called by leaders of an uprising in the occupied territories on the 20th anniversary of an Israeli raid into Jordan.

UN officials said Israeli troops shot Adel Ahmed Abdallah Jaber in a demonstration in the town of Rafah, on the Egyptian border, and he was dead on arrival at Nasser Hospital in nearby Khan Yunis.

The shooting took the unofficial toll of Palestinians who have died in 14 weeks of unrest to 102 and sparked widespread rioting in the southern Gaza Strip, the UN official said.

The officials also said the body of 47-year-old Omar Abu Marakhil from the Jabalya refugee camp was taken to Gaza's Shifa Hospital, where doctors said he had died from severe blows to the head.

Palestinian sources said they believed he had been beaten by troops but the Army said it had no information on the incident.

Unknown assailants attacked the home of Palestinian magazine editor Jack Khazmo in the village of A-Ram, north of Jerusalem, during the night, firing more than 30 rounds from a Kalashnikov assault rifle into his house.

Khazmo, editor of the nationalist weekly Al Bayad Al Siyasi, was not injured but said the attackers shattered windows and tried to set fire to his and his brother's cars.

An Israeli soldier was shot dead in the West Bank town of Bethlehem yesterday in an apparent departure from the strict ban on the use of firearms imposed by the clandestine "Unified National Leadership of the Uprising."

Today's protests marked the anniversary of a 1968 Israeli commando raid on Palestinian commando bases at Al Karameh in Jordan.

Troops were out in force in Gaza, manning all main road junctions and searching every Arab vehicle entering the coastal strip. All cars from the West Bank were turned back at the Erez checkpoint.

Israel Radio said graffiti scrawled in many parts of the Strip called for attacks on Israeli civilians and soldiers to mark Karameh Day.

Security sources said the municipality building in the West Bank village of Beitunia near Ramallah was set afire overnight.

The top floor, where offices of Israeli-appointed municipal officials are located, and the front door of the building were burned, they said.

In the nearby town of El Bireh, two fire bombs were thrown at the home of a Jordanian Member of Parliament, but caused no damage or injuries, police said.

They said Palestinians also hurled two fire bombs at an Israeli car in Hebron which caused no damage.

In Farrah refugee camp, near Nablus, two Palestinians were wounded by live ammunition during violent demonstrations, an Army spokesman said.

Leaders of Israel's 700,000 Arabs decided yesterday to call a general strike in solidarity with Palestinians fighting Israeli rule in the West Bank and Gaza.

Some 12,000 Palestinians demonstrated at Lebanon's largest refugee camp in the southern port city of Sidon today in support of the uprising in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Shultz-Shevardnadze talks

Afghan issue tops agenda

WASHINGTON, March 21, (Reuters): Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze arrived in Washington today for talks that could break the current deadlock over terms for a settlement of the Afghanistan problem and clear the way for Moscow to pull out its troops.

But he gave a clear signal that he would want to probe American intentions in Central America, telling reporters at Andrews Air Force base outside Washington the situation around Nicaragua was "becoming of concern, of serious concern to us."

Shevardnadze is expected to have three formal sessions with Secretary of State George Shultz, probably towards the end of May, for a summit with Kremlin leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Shultz and Shevardnadze are expected to discuss an agenda for the summit during their talks and seek to give a fresh impetus to negotiations on a treaty cutting the superpowers' strategic nuclear arsenals by 50 per cent.

In a statement, the Soviet minister said they would also be discussing space weapons, human rights and regional conflicts in talks he hoped, would be "fruitful and constructive."

They will also survey the Middle East problem, where Moscow is urging Washington to set aside efforts to achieve its own settlement so that the two powers can work together for an international conference under United Nations auspices.

Beirut bomb blast kills 1

BEIRUT, March 21, (Reuters): At least one person was killed and 13 injured when an explosion demolished a four-storey building in West Beirut today, police said.

They said the body of a middle-aged man was pulled from the rubble. The injured were taken to the Makkas Hospital, near the scene of the blast in the crowded Rawass residential district.

They said it was still not clear whether the explosion was the result of a car bomb or explosives placed in the building.

"One of the injured men who was taken to hospital told us the explosion took place inside one of the building's apartments but we are still checking," one police officer said.

Subroto dropped in Jakarta reshuffle

JAKARTA, March 21, (Reuters): President Suharto of Indonesia announced sweeping cabinet changes today, replacing the defence, foreign, energy, and interior ministers in a cabinet to take South-East Asia's largest nation into the 1990s.

Listing his new ministerial team for the next five years, the 66-year-old President replaced Energy Minister and former Opec President Subroto and Foreign Minister Mochtar Kusumaatmadja, who had both been in their jobs for 10 years.

Suharto, who was re-elected this month for a fifth five-year term which will keep him in power until 1993, said he was bringing in 19 new ministers.

He named former armed forces commander and intelligence chief General Benny Murdani as Defence Minister, calming speculation of a rift with the military, diplomats said.

The new foreign minister is editor-turned diplomat Ali Alatas, a 55-year-old Muslim who was Indonesia's ambassador to the United Nations.

Investment

Replacing Subroto is former investment chief Ginandjar Kartasasmita, a Tokyo-educated nationalist who is regarded by foreign businessmen as a tough negotiator.

In a nationally-televised announcement, Suharto said his objective was to maintain continuity while bringing younger men into top positions.

"Continuity of development should be given priority by this new cabinet," he declared. He said ministers must work closely with each other to meet strong economic challenges facing the government.

Ayatollah appears fit

Rise against superpowers: Khomeini

NICOSIA, March 21, (AP): In a rare public appearance, Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini yesterday urged Muslims worldwide to rise against the Soviet Union and the United States, describing them as "forces of oppression and evil."

In a 15-minute, nation-wide speech, broadcast by Tehran Television and monitored in Nicosia, the patriarch of the Islamic revolution also said Iran would continue to fight against Iraq until "final victory," ruling out any peace settlement of the 7-1/2-year-old Gulf war.

Khomeini, 87, spoke on the occasion of Nowruz, the start of the Iranian new year. He appeared physically fit. His voice was strong and he appeared healthier than he was earlier in the year, when he looked frail on television.

Iran's black-turbaned religious guide hailed ancient leaders who sacrificed their lives preaching Islam after the death of Prophet Mohammed (PBUH) in the 7th century.

Then he said: "It is incumbent upon every Muslim to rise up and sacrifice all he has for the cause of Islam."

He urged "Muslims all over the world (to) rise against the forces of oppression and evil." "The superpowers claim to advocate justice. In fact, all they want is to impose their will and make us obey them. They would like it if we obey them," he said.

Khomeini: rules out peace

He urged his nation not to be "deceived by foreign propaganda," apparently echoing criticism by Iranian officials in recent days that the international media has ignored Iran's alleged victories on the war front.

US naval battle group arrives in South Korea

N.Korea places troops on alert

SEOUL, March 21, (Reuters): A US naval battle group arrived in South Korea today as North Korea put its troops on top combat alert, denouncing the annual war games in the South as an "extremely dangerous test nuclear war exercise."

The six-vessel force, led by the 64,000-ton carrier Midway, anchored off Pusan on the south-eastern tip of the divided peninsula to take part in manoeuvres involving 140,000 South Korean and 60,000 American troops.

A spokesman for the United Nations Command (UNC) said North Korea had been invited, as in previous years, to send observers to watch "Team Spirit '88," 13th in an annual series of what are billed as joint US-South Korean defensive exercises.

Pyeongyang ignored the offer.

Instead it announced today it had ordered "complete combat mobilisation" of its troops and militia in face of what it said was "a vicious offensive operational exercise aimed at waging a pre-emptive strike against our republic."

A radio Pyongyang statement, monitored in London, called Team Spirit an extremely dangerous test nuclear war exercise.

It added: "An extremely grave situation has been created on the Korean peninsula in which an all-out war could break out at any time."

Officials at the UNC, which has overall command over South Korean troops defending the demilitarised zone and the 41,000 US servicemen based here, said North Korea had issued violent denunciations of previous year's manoeuvres, and they saw nothing qualitatively new in the latest statement.

Diplomats in Seoul, however, cautioned against underestimating Pyongyang's anger. They said that while the rhetoric might sound familiar, the present context in North-South relations was a particularly dangerous one.

In recent years the South's growing prosperity and status in the world community has irked the North, which reacted with fury to the International Olympic Committee's decision to award Seoul the 1988 Olympic Games.

Seoul and Washington have warned of attempts to whip up tension along the border, or of terrorist attacks in the South before and during the Games.

Protest strike marks Sharpeville Day

SOWETO, March 21, (Reuters): Hundreds of thousands of black South Africans staged strikes in defiance of the white-led government today to mark the anniversary of the 1960 Sharpeville massacre.

Despite a ban on political strikes, Soweto and other black townships around Johannesburg were paralysed by the protest which hit numerous factories and businesses across South Africa's industrial heartland.

The protest had a big impact in several areas of eastern Cape province, where transport officials said up to 80 per cent of blacks stayed at home, but it appeared to flop in some cities and many other towns.

Crackdown
Local businessmen reported Cape Town and Durban were barely affected.

The anniversary, commemorating 69 blacks shot dead by police at Sharpeville south of Johannesburg, is one of the most emotive days of South Africa's political calendar.

A government crackdown last month, effectively banning 17 leading anti-apartheid groups, hampered efforts to stage coordinated nationwide action but the strike call reached millions of blacks through pamphlets and words of mouth.

The pamphlets called for all blacks except nurses and journalists to back the strike. Full details may not be reported under censorship regulations.

This year's demonstrations were fuelled by death sentences passed on six Sharpeville residents for complicity in the 1984 mob killing of Deputy Mayor Jacob Dlamini.

Zhao steals thunder from Li

BEIJING, March 21, (Reuters): A major speech by Chinese Communist Party leader Zhao Ziyang calling for fast economic growth has stolen acting Premier Li Peng's thunder and indicated major policy differences, Western diplomats say.

All major newspapers today carried a speech by Zhao to the party's Central Committee on March 15 in which he said China could maintain fast and sustained economic growth this year, provided it improved efficiency.

The speech came shortly before Li's scheduled keynote address to China's parliament, the National People's Congress, which opens its annual session on Friday.

"Zhao's speech covers most of the points Li is going to make," one Western diplomat said. "He has stolen his thunder."

Differed
He said the two men differed on how fast China's economy should grow, with Zhao arguing for a rapid pace at the risk of rising inflation and Li arguing for caution at the risk of low productivity and under-utilisation of resources.

Another diplomat said that while considerable differences over economic policy existed between Zhao and Li, open political conflict was unlikely to develop.

Zhao: speech

"Zhao's line was approved last year and has the blessing of Deng Xiaoping (China's senior leader)," the diplomat said.

In his speech, Zhao spoke of "conflicts of interest" existing in China and said the party needed to be more open in its dealing with people.

Conflicts
"Many social contradictions can be solved through reforms but in the process new conflicts and adjustments of interest groups will occur," Zhao was quoted as saying by the party newspaper People's Daily.

An article in Friday's Economic Daily arguing Zhao's line said economic growth and price stability were contradictory. Diplomats took this as aimed at Li, who has said stabilising prices is a major priority in 1988.

Inflation has become a major problem in China and a source of social unrest.

Egypt extends emergency

CAIRO, March 21, (AP): With an overwhelming majority, Parliament yesterday approved a three-year extension of emergency laws that the government said were needed to combat fundamentalists and terrorist threats.

The Middle East news agency said 94 of the 95 opposition members of parliament voted against the extension, as well as two of the six independent members.

It said two members of the government's National Democratic Party also voted against it, but the rest of the 355 NDP members and the four independent members voted for it, passing the extension.

Approved
During the evening session and before the vote was taken, a committee headed by Rifaat El-Mahgoub, head of the People's Assembly or Parliament, approved the extension of the emergency laws which have been in existence since President Anwar Sadat was assassinated Oct 6, 1981, by Muslim fundamentalists.

The Middle East news agency said the new extension would be in force from May 1st to 31st May, 1991.

"The emergency measures are conducted within the framework of legality and sovereignty of the constitution and are under complete judicial supervision and there is no reason to fear these measures which enable us to weed out plots," Mena quoted a parliamentary committee's report as saying.

The emergency laws ban demonstrations, unauthorised assembly and strikes, and give the government wide powers of search without warrant and detention of people regarded as security risks.

Bangladesh may lift emergency in April

DHAKA, March 21, (AP): The government may lift the state of emergency by mid-April when the newly elected Parliament is expected to convene, the speaker of the Parliament was quoted today as saying.

The emergency was imposed Nov 27 after the opposition launched a series of marches and strikes against President Hossain Mohammad Ershad.

Shamsul Huda Chowdhury, the Speaker, said the legislative body's inaugural session may start about April 15, the independent Inqilab newspaper reported.

"Parliament and emergency rule cannot go together," the Bengali-language newspaper quoted Chowdhury as saying.

Major opposition parties boycotted the March 3 parliamentary elections and refuse to participate in future elections unless Ershad resigns from the presidency.

More than 5,000 political activists were detained under emergency laws during the opposition campaign. Most have been freed, according to officials.

A senior opposition official, Suranjit Sen Gupta, said today that the opposition would renew strikes and protests against the government by mid-April to coincide with the opening of the Parliament.

The opposition have also decided to hold various anti-government programmes on March 24, the day President Ershad took power in a bloodless coup six years ago.

The decision was made on Saturday night at a meeting of the liaison committee of the three major opposition groupings.

The committee urged students, workers and all professionals to wear black badges and take part in the programme on March 24.

Bombs rock central Tokyo

TOKYO, March 21, (Reuters): Two explosions rocked part of central Tokyo today and police said one was apparently caused by a bomb under a car parked near the Israeli embassy.

The Israeli embassy said the explosion occurred around 50 metres (yards) from the mission in the parking lot of a local television station.

Police said the bomb damaged the roof of the lot and smashed windows in a building opposite. "There is absolutely no connection between the explosion and the embassy," an embassy spokesman said.

Related
This is not the only explosion in Tokyo. Police sources have told us that it is the work of an organisation fighting against Narita airport.

Past bomb attacks in Japan have often been related to the construction of Narita, Tokyo's main airport, 40 miles (60 km) north-east of the city. Local farmers and radicals oppose the airport.

The other blast, in the Japanese capital's main business district, broke the window of the Saudi Arabian Airlines office and knocked down the airline's street sign.

Police said there were no reports of casualties from the explosions, which occurred almost simultaneously shortly after seven p.m. (1000 GMT).

A television news report showed film of a motorbike blown apart in the business district explosion.

Kyodo news agency said police suspected that a radical leftist organisation could be responsible for the explosions. It said police did not identify the organisation.

Indian denial

NEW DELHI, March 21, (Reuters): An Indian government spokesman dismissed today a news report from Washington that India has built about 20 highly sophisticated nuclear bombs.

"It does not even merit a comment," an External Affairs Ministry spokesman told reporters querying the report from Washington by a news agency that the low-yield bombs could be delivered by combat aircraft.

Indian troops launch search for Tigers chief Prabhakaran

COLOMBO, March 21, (Agencies): About 6,000 strong Indian peace keeping force (IPKF) backed by helicopter yesterday launched a search operation for Velupillai Prabhakaran, the fleeing leader of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE), in the northern province of Sri Lanka, military sources said.

After Prabhakaran's bunker in the north-east of Vavuniya had been captured by the IPKF last week, he was reportedly on the run in dense jungle in the North-east and Eastern Provinces.

The IPKF will search the jungle between Vavuniya and Trincomalee to the south, and between Mullaitivu and Mannar on the coastlines to the east and west of the island.

Killed
Indian troops killed five Tiger women guerrillas in a gunfight in north-east Sri Lanka at the weekend, military officials said.

A man from LTTE died in a second battle in Mullaitivu district.

One Indian soldier also died.

Easy victory for Bush in Puerto Rico

Jackson is right behind Dukakis

DETROIT, March 21, (AP): Michael Dukakis has a quarter of the delegates needed to win the Democratic presidential nomination, but Jesse Jackson is right behind after a weekend of good showings for both Democrats in Kansas, Texas and Puerto Rico. Among Republicans, George Bush swept to his 23rd victory.

Democratic candidates turned their attention to Michigan, in the nation's north-central Midwest, where caucuses on Saturday offer the next big delegate prize of the season.

Boosting
Congressman Richard Gephardt leads the parade into the state today, talking with auto executives and steel workers as he works for the victory he must have here to rescue his campaign.

Nearby Wisconsin looks like the next major battleground for the Republicans, after Bush won his latest victory in the Puerto Rico primary yesterday. The Vice President won with ease over Sen. Bob Dole, who admitted that he has done little to slow down Bush's drive for the Republican nomination.

Bush picked up the 14 delegates at stake in Puerto Rico, boosting his total to 788. That's nearly 70 per cent of the 1,139 he needs to win at the national convention in New Orleans this summer.

Dole, who hasn't won at event since Feb 23, has only 178. Former television evangelist Pat Robertson had 17.

Uncommitted

In Puerto Rico, Jackson won the non-binding preference poll with Dukakis running second and Simon third. But it was a fight more about local matters than presidential politics.

The 51 delegates from Puerto Rico all ran as uncommitted, and the campaigns promised major efforts to woo them in coming sion from India to despatch out troops to the north and east of our country?

In this month Tamil rebels have shot and killed nearly 100 Sinhalese villagers in the troubled eastern district, shot at passenger buses and raided unprotected villages. Many of the dead were women and little children.

Visit

The Dinesara commenting on the Sri Lankan Land Development Minister, Gamini Dissanayake's sudden visit to New Delhi last week said it was designed to "fall at the feet of Rajiv Gandhi and seek his permission to send Sri Lankan troops to protect Sinhalese villages in the east."

Dissanayake was accompanied by a delegation of top Army commanders from Sri Lanka.

On his return Dissanayake in an official statement said India had agreed to allow Sri Lankan troops to protect threatened Sinhalese and Muslim villages in the eastern parts of the island.

rocket-propelled grenades at the 61,762-ton Liberian-registered Fumi today, setting its engine room ablaze and blasting holes in one of its tanks.

The Japanese-managed tanker, laden with Saudi Arabian oil, was on its way out of the Gulf. There were no reports of casualties, the officials said.

The London-based Lloyd's shipping intelligence unit quoted the Fumi's captain as reporting "no injuries, but big damage around accommodation (quarters) by six rounds of rocket gunfire. Now keeping on my way."

Iranian gunboats attacked the 84,631-ton Liberian-flag Atlantic Peace yesterday in almost the same area off Ras Al Khaimah in the UAE, near the entrance to the Strait.

Fire

The Atlantic Peace was hit by six rocket-propelled grenades that started a small fire. But it was quickly extinguished, the officials reported.

Today's Iranian attacks were in apparent retaliation for Iraq's raid on Kharg in the northern end of the Gulf.

The executives said salvage gunboats helped the Fumi's crew put out the fire aboard the tanker.

Iraq said it fired another missile at Tehran today as the "war of the cities" showed no sign of abating after more than three weeks.

It was the 34th launched at the city of six million people since a two-day informal truce in the raids on population centres collapsed eight days ago.

The Iraqi News Agency quoted its correspondent in the southern Iraqi port city of Basra as saying the city came under intensive bombardment by Iranian rockets and long-range artillery overnight and today.

"The bombardment, which also covered residential areas at Al Der Al Zubair townships north and south of Basra, killed and wounded a number of civilians, destroyed houses, shops and cars," INA said.

The Iranian News Agency said eight civilians were killed and 17 wounded when a long-range Iraqi missile hit a residential neighbourhood of Tehran late last night.

Another 25 people were killed and 46 wounded in Iraqi air raids on the western cities of Boujeon and Hamedan last night, the agency reported. It said a mosque in Boujeon was hit.

PORT ARANSAS, Texas, March 21, (UPI): Thousands of students on spring break rioted in a four-hour melee broken up early yesterday by police firing tear gas, authorities said. Seven people were injured and eight were arrested.

Police said the rioting was triggered when a car driven by a non-student hit a woman on the beach and tried to flee.

Truck accident

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, March 21, (UPI): Sixty-one religious pilgrims died yesterday and 18 were injured when a truck in which they were travelling crashed through a bridge railing and plunged 300 feet (100 m) into a ravine, officials said.

Dissidents

VIENNA, March 21, (Reuters): More than 400 dissidents from five East Bloc countries and Yugoslavia, in an unprecedented joint action, issued an appeal today for the right to refuse military service.

The call to delegates at the Vienna conference on security and cooperation in Europe to consider the matter highlights the dissidents' growing ability to coordinate limited political moves, despite official communist efforts to thwart this.

BELFAST, March 21, (AP): Protestant leaders demanded British authorities resume policing IRA funerals after five people died during burials in a four-day period, including two British soldiers.

The demands came yesterday, as police fired plastic bullets at youths who hijacked a bus in Roman Catholic West Belfast and tried to attack a riot squad, authorities said. No injuries were reported.

Tom King, Northern Ireland Secretary, was expected to come under pressure today, in the House of Commons in London, over the killing of the two plainclothes British soldiers who were dragged from their car on Saturday by IRA mourners who then beat, stripped and fatally shot them.

On Wednesday, as security forces stayed away from Belfast's Milltown cemetery for the funerals of three IRA members killed by British forces in Gibraltar, a Protestant gunman killed three mourners and wounded 68 with grenades and bullets.

The two soldiers slain on Saturday interrupted the funeral of Kevin Brady, 20, one of the three killed in Milltown cemetery.

Procession

The British Army said yesterday the two soldiers had ignored orders to stay away from the Irish Republican Army funeral procession. All soldiers in the British province had been told to stay away from Saturday's funeral, an Army spokesman said. He said an Army investigation was under way.

"The two corporals should not have been where they were and we are interested in examining how that came about," said the spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity.

An Army helicopter assigned to film the funeral in Roman Catholic West Belfast hovered overhead during the incident in which corporals Derek Wood, 24, and David Howes, 23 were killed.

King flew to Belfast yesterday for briefings from Army and police chiefs and was shown the helicopter's film of the attack. The outlawed IRA, fighting to end British rule, has claimed responsibility for the shootings.

Ulster unionist leader James Moynihan claimed the two soldiers were "sacrificed" to the new policy while 500 members of the security forces were on standby in the city.

Kuwait shows interest in Turkish plan to provide water

By Fathima Ahmed

KUWAIT has shown "apparent interest" in a proposed Turkish plan to provide water to the Arabian peninsula through a multi-billion dollar "peace pipeline project".

A Turkish delegation in Kuwait yesterday on a one day visit to seek "cooperation and facilities" to carry out a feasibility study for the pipeline project.

The leader of the seven-member delegation, Necati Utkan, yesterday said: "Kuwaiti officials were careful but they have shown apparent interest in the idea." He held talks with Kuwait's Minister of Electricity and Water, and several high-level officials. Documents of a preliminary feasibility study were handed over for evaluation.

Utkan described the idea as the "brainchild" of Turkish Prime Minister Turgut Ozal. The idea was proposed in 1986.

The team has already visited Syria, Jordan and the UAE. Yesterday they flew to Bahrain and will go on to Qatar and Oman before returning to Ankara later this month. Water from two rivers Seyhan and Ceyhan will be supplied through the proposed pipeline, which will be split into two: Western pipeline and Gulf pipeline.

Phases
The $8.5 billion Western pipeline will be built in two phases pumping 3.5 billion cubic metres of water each day. In the initial phase it will supply water south to Syria and Jordan. In the second phase, water supply would be extended to Saudi Arabia.

The $12.5 billion Gulf pipeline originates in south-central Anatolia and follows the old Trans-Arabian pipeline route, supplying 2.5 billion cubic metres of water each day to Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Qatar, the UAE and Oman.

The pipelines, to be constructed through mountains and under desert sands in the Gulf, will have 16 pumping stations. The Gulf pipeline would be branched off to Kuwait, and according to a preliminary study, Kuwait's quota would get 600,000 cubic metres of water each day.

Turkey has earmarked "$2.5 million to conduct a feasibility study and has despatched the team to sell the idea.

At the moment Turkey is looking "for cooperation and facilities" to conduct the feasibility. The project is "economically feasible and technically attractive", said Utkan.

The Turkish officials believe that the "peace pipeline will forge closer links among the nations in the region." They also see it as a means of reducing overdependence on "one source of water".

"Isn't it better to have alternatives, they ask, insisting that desalination plants would not be phased out. They also consider it as a cheaper means of getting water, than, say, pulling icebergs from the North Pole, or bringing sweet water from Canada.

Turkish water would cost between 84 cents and $1.04 per cubic metre, less than half the amount needed to extract potable water from desalination plants.

Critics are concerned about the possibility of turning the Gulf "hostage" in the hands of Turkey that will be able to control the tap. The Turkish officials are not apprehensive about a possibility of disruption. "When something like water is concerned, everybody will have an interest and will preserve it," asserts Utkan. "That is why it is called the peace pipeline project", says Gerol Dinc, director of Turkey's State Planning Department.

The feasibility would be completed in a year's time. After that, Turkey expects "an informed decision from the nations involved."

If the project gets off the ground it would be built in 10 years time.

Committee to study ministry's performance

ACCORDING to well-informed sources at Kuwait's Public Health Ministry a number of ministerial decisions will be issued in the near future regarding work performance and improvement in health services in the country.

Sources said the Health Minister Dr Abdul Razzak Al Abdul Razzak had made several unannounced visits to health centres and hospitals over the past few weeks and had toured the various sections in order to acquaint himself with the level of service offered.

The minister formed an ad-hoc committee to study the function of certain ministry departments and divisions, which has submitted its recommendations for a new ministry work policy.

Forging closer ties with future leaders

UK encouraging Kuwaitis to study in British institutes

By Jadranka Porter

BRITAIN is trying to encourage Kuwaitis to pursue their higher education in the UK as a means of forging closer ties with future Kuwaiti leaders in all fields.

"In the long term it will be good for Britain's relations with the Gulf states if we educate the Gulf Arabs who are going to be in positions of power," said David Sharp the head of the British education mission currently visiting Kuwait.

R. Alexander of the University of Bradford, also on the mission, pointed out that the effort could be mutually beneficial. "The foreign students educate our potential leaders," he said adding that this could improve the British government policy which in his view lacks international perspective.

A group of British academics representing 12 universities and two polytechnics are on the last leg of a Gulf tour which also took them to the UAE and Bahrain.

The visit initiated by the British Council is the first group effort although some British universities have made contacts in the Gulf before.

Scanning

The academics are on a three-day exploratory mission in Kuwait scanning the scene with the aim of establishing long term collaboration with local education authorities. The academics held talks yesterday at Kuwait University.

They will also hold talks with the Public Authority for Applied Education and different scientific institutes. They are holding consultative sessions at the Sheraton Hotel with those interested in studying in Britain. Similar sessions in Bahrain and the UAE were extremely well attended.

"In Bahrain we had 400 people at one session alone," said Sharp. Kamal Andrawes of the University of Strathclyde expected that in Kuwait most of the inquiries will be in connection with the post-graduate courses.

Sharp said that the presence of foreign students is also financially important for British universities. Tuition fees for courses in social studies are £4,000, in engineering and science £5,250 and in medicine and dentistry £9,000 per year. Living expenses for foreign students in Britain are estimated at £2,500 for undergraduate and £3,500 for post graduate students for each academic year.

Foreign Students manage to adjust well to life in Britain said the academics.

"Many problems that were there 10 years ago were eased as British cities have become cosmopolitan" said Alexander.

34 accidents

THERE were 34 traffic accidents in Kuwait yesterday. Seven took place in the capital, three in Hawalli, 13 in Ahmadi and 11 in Jahra.

David Sharp

"Material difficulties such as availability of their foodstuffs and places of worship have disappeared. There are cultural differences but foreign students have to adjust and they do."

The British universities are also prepared to go out of their way to accommodate some of the demands of the Arab students such as the self-contained accommodation for girls from conservative families. But Sharp said that mixed classes will remain to be a feature of British academic institutes.

KUWAIT PRESS DIGEST

Arab summit

A KUWAITI daily yesterday stressed that the Arab summit, currently being prepared for, will not be able to realise its designated goals, accusing Arabs of being "unqualified" to find an exit from crisis.

Al Rai Al Aam said, in a front-page editorial, that solutions to Arab causes will not come through summits, no matter how extraordinary they may be, noting that a successful gathering would be one that backs the Palestinian uprising militarily.

"We want the conference as part of a comprehensive Arab and Islamic drive which aims at formulating a balance related to a real stance which deals with the uprising and the Iraq-Iran war through strategic considerations, and away from barter deals, auctions and incomplete proposals," the paper said.

It warned that the wars and crisis Arab face can longer be settled through emergency summits, where more serious actions are needed such as political and military confrontations with Israel and its allies.

GULF PRESS

Racial discrimination

A UNITED Arab Emirates English language daily in an editorial marking the International day for the elimination of racial discrimination called for focusing attention on Zionism and apartheid.

The Dubai-based Khaleej Times described the two policies as the "worst and most institutionalised form" of racial discrimination. The international day for the elimination of racial discrimination is observed by the United Nations today which is the anniversary of two notable massacres of blacks by the South African government.

The English language daily pointed out "Zionism has been equated with racism in countless United Nations documents."

"The effort being made by Israel to destroy and negate the identity of the Palestinians is nothing but blatant racism and neo-colonialism," it added.

Pointing to the closer relations between Israel and South Africa the paper said "It is not by accident that there is such close economic, military and political cooperation" between the two repressive regimes.

"There are many other manifestations of racism throughout the world but Zionism and apartheid represent the evil in its worst and most institutionalised form."

Experts at Justice Ministry examine cases

KHALED Al Mudfi, the director of the experts department at Kuwait's Justice Ministry, said the department examines cases referred by courts, general prosecution and the Criminal Investigation Department. The department also makes recommendations on reports submitted by special legal advisors which cover technical matters related to individual cases.

The Chamber of Commerce and Industry, Kuwait University and Kuwait Institute for Scientific Research are sometimes involved in special research for the department, Al Mudfi added. He said the department had completed a total of 4,568 cases in 1983 and had completed 1,546 cases in the last four months.

Al Mudfi denied that there was any international delay in completing work referred by legal authorities, stressing that the nature of their work required careful consideration before decisions could be reached.

He added that the ministry encouraged Kuwaiti young people to enter the department with various privileges and benefits.

Manpower stability by next year: Mishari

KAC expects to make $60m from chartering unused planes

By Lima Al Khalafawi

KUWAIT Airways Corporation Chairman and Managing Director Ahmad Al Mishari said KAC would achieve manpower stability within the next year. He said that the decrease in manpower was due to the company's general policy of curbing expenditures which has yielded positive results.

In a speech at the opening session of the annual conference, Al Mishari said the KAC had been able to recover KD13 million of the total KD25 million in lost investments in countries such as Iran, India, Libya and Egypt, due to political and economic conditions. He explained that the company is looking for reinvestment opportunities in these countries as a means of fully recovering its losses.

KAC has two Jumbo jets leased which will return to the fleet in May and June and two Airbus will be leased to other airlines, he said, adding "this is better than selling them."

Standardise
He emphasised that this would not affect KAC's performance.

In the next two years, he pointed out, KAC is expecting profits of $60 million from chartering unused airplanes from its fleet to other airlines.

Ahmed Al Mishari addressing the press conference.

The decision to standardise air fares, he said, has been postponed, leaving the market to organise itself. The airlines are voluntarily attempting to avoid price discrepancies, he added. He said KAC has no intentions of competing with travel agencies in any way, adding, "KAC is a national airline and people should be encouraged to travel with us."

Al Mishari said KAC had been able to achieve its goal by continuous research on the best methods of marketing in all areas. KAC's assets have increased to an estimated KD500 million which is far above their book value.

KAC has been forced to adapt to conditions in the region resulting from the Iran-Iraq war and has dropped its flights to Tehran, flying instead to Dubai where passengers connect with Iran Air.

Project

Al Mishari said KAC is considering a project with the Kuwait-based Public Investment Authority to establish an international travel firm that would utilise KAC's operations and serve as a promoter for KAC in hotels owned by Kuwait worldwide.

KAC is also negotiating with the authority regarding a project that would ensure the best use of KAC's foreign accounts and investments in touristic ventures, Al Mishari said. He estimated the current value of these foreign accounts at KD13 million.

Regarding investments abroad, Al Mishari said the company had not been affected by the stock market slump and that KAC investments were still earning profits.

The economic situation has forced airlines to adopt policies of cooperation with international airlines, he said.

"KAC is discussing a proposal to cooperate with three other airlines in offering flights to South America and Australia," he added.

In the Gulf area, KAC is increasing the number of flights to GCC states and has established, along with Saudia and Gulf Air, a holding company to establish joint projects such as the Islamic kitchen.

Al Mishari said KAC is also working on the establishment of a shareholding company for joint reservations service which would benefit all reservation offices and airlines operating from Kuwait.

Indian workers still negotiating*Employer sets deadline for reaching accord

By Fathima Ahmed

THIRTY TWO Indian workers camping at the Indian embassy have been "given one last chance" to accept the contract terms offered by their employer, Ali M. Ajmi, chairman of Al Ajmi Partners, Trading and Contracting Company.

Talks between the embassy officials and Al Ajmi continue today to "find a mutually beneficial compromise."

Al Ajmi, in an interview last night, said he would not continue negotiations if talks "fail" today.

"I will never sit down and talk again," he said. "If they want to return home, I'll give them a farewell party," he said. But the company will not bear the expenses of sending back the labourers.

"If the workers don't accept my fair deal, I'll be forced to take other steps," he said, hinting at a possibility of notifying the Ministry of Social Affairs and Labour to handle the issue.

Al Ajmi has offered the workers, all drivers, a total salary of KD100, broken down as basic salary — KD50, food allowance — KD40 and performance allowance — KD10. Drivers would be given a day off each week.

The drivers' basic pay is KD50, plus 40 dinars overtime. In lieu of the overtime payment, Al Ajmi said he would pay KD40 to the drivers as food allowance. "They'll have a normal eight-hour working day, thus eliminating overtime payment. Instead of that I am willing to give them KD40 food allowance," he said.

These terms would be incorporated in a new contract. If the workers agree, the new contract would be attested by the Indian embassy.

Misguiding

The drivers have been camping at the Indian embassy since March 14. Misunderstanding between the employer and employees arose due to a "demand letter" signed by Al Ajmi to "fulfil formalities" of recruiting labour from India.

Al Ajmi claimed the recruiting agents told him that he could sign the "demand letter" which states general contract terms and pay scale. The letter said the salary of workers would be KD100. "They told me it is just a formality," he said.

After coming to Kuwait, the drivers signed another contract stating KD90 as the total salary, broken down as KD50 basic pay plus KD40 overtime. The contract is in Arabic and English, with a Malayalam translation.

Consult

Al Ajmi blamed "five or six drivers of abusing the other poor drivers by misguiding them." According to Al Ajmi, some drivers "created a feeling of discontent" among the others, forcing them to "go to the Indian embassy."

"They did not approach the management about their problem, nor did they consult us before going to the embassy. One morning they just did not report for work," he said.

Commenting on the role of the embassy officials Al Ajmi said he appreciates "the understanding of officials and the difficult position the embassy has been placed under."

"I have compromised. I expect the workers to compromise. If they don't, I'll have no choice but to take the matter to the court," he said.

In a Kuwaiti court the last contract in Arabic, is considered valid.

Al Ajmi said that "after signing the last contract," all other documents are "invalidated."

"The workers are keen to settle the issue. We expect to arrive at a compromise today," said an embassy official. The drivers are in a "vulnerable spot" because they signed a new contract in Kuwait.

Officials expect to "iron out one or two minor points" during discussions at a meeting today and reach a favourable settlement, beneficial to both parties.

Bishara meets US envoy

GCC Secretary-General Abdullah Yacoub Bishara met today with the US ambassador to Saudi Arabia.

Bishara discussed with the US ambassador horizons of cooperation between the six Gulf Cooperation Council states and the US and issues of mutual concern.

Syria pledges to defend Saudi Arabia

DAMASCUS, March 21, (Agencies): Syria pledged today to help defend Saudi Arabia against Israeli attack after Israel expressed concern at the Saudi acquisition of Chinese ground-to-ground missiles.

China confirmed today it had sold missiles to Saudi Arabia, saying they were non-nuclear and for defensive purposes only.

Israeli Minister without portfolio Yitzhak Moda'i said on Sunday Israel would not tolerate the presence on Saudi soil of the missiles, believed to be CSS-2 class weapons capable of reaching Israeli territory.

Aggressive
"These statements uncovered the aggressive nature of the Israeli enemy and its aims for imposing its domination and control of the region and the entire Arab nation," an official Syrian source said in a statement.

"It is natural any aggression against the sister kingdom of Saudi Arabia is an aggression against Syria with all what this might require in shouldering all national responsibilities to confront the aggression," he said.

An Israeli newspaper reported on Sunday that Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, currently in the United States, warned US officials that Saudi Arabia must get rid of the missiles that have the range to reach Israel.

Israel Radio quoted Yossi Ben Aharon, one of Shamir's closest aides, as saying Israel would not wait until a potential danger became a real one.

In 1981, Israeli planes destroyed a nuclear reactor in Iraq in what Israel said was a pre-emptive strike to stop Baghdad building nuclear weapons to use against the Jewish state.

GCC Traffic Week

RIYADH, March 21, (Kuna): The 4th GCC Traffic Week will be held from March 26 to 31 with the theme "Pay attention to the road."

He said that the GCC states will organise seminars, lectures and television programmes, as well as contests on traffic rules and the theme of the week.

The GCC secretariat-general will issue a pamphlet explaining the aims of the 4th Traffic Week and containing articles on traffic matters.

Singers captivate audience

Chopin and rockin' and foot-stomping

By Keith Wells

OPENING with a rather solemn piece of Chopin, played by June Stevenson, the full band roared into "Bat Out of Hell" and the Rock'n Romance show at the Bubiyan Room of the Regency Palace Hotel was on its way. Personally, I'm not sure that Meat Loaf and Chopin go together too well, but at least the four Chopin piano pieces scattered throughout the programme gave everyone a chance to catch their breath.

Waltz

The rock numbers were great and show that the band, directed by June and Phil Thomas have improved greatly since their success in Jukebox Four last year. The playing now is much tighter and more controlled and the lead guitarist, Ammar Al Binni has developed a sharper tone which gives his playing much more of a cutting edge. Even so, he could occasionally do with being more aggressive and louder since he is sometimes in danger of being swamped by the rest of the band. When he does shine through, Ammar's playing has a lovely lyrical quality, especially evident on some of the Dire Straits numbers.

Star of the show, of course, is June Stevenson, who is a consummate musician, switching with ease from a Chopin Waltz to a breathtakingly lovely version of Elton John's "Candle in the Wind" or the classic "I'm Not in Love," which she sang with real feeling and expressiveness. She can rock with the best of them too, as she showed on the rip-roaring, foot-stomping version of "Hit Me With Your Best Shot" which had the crowd dancing in their seats, loving every minute.

Des Cross, the other lead singer, took a while to get warmed up, but after he turned in a superb rendering of Rod Stewart's "Maggie May" he had no more problems with nerves and delighted the crowd with his scorching performance. On the two Stevie Nicks wood classics, "Gimme Some Lovin'" and "Keep on Running," Des was fabulous and his rousing version of Chuck Berry's "Rock'n'Roll Music" was a marvellous finale to a thoroughly enjoyable evening.

Before the show Phil Thomas said that they had had severe problems with the piano, which had gone out of tune due to the humidity, but 40 minutes with a hair-dryer managed to cure the problem. Then, during the first half of the show on the first night, one of the speakers for the vocals kept cutting out, but it was a minor problem that was sorted out by the second half. However, I felt that the drums were a bit too loud compared to the rest of the band. Part of the problem is that the stage takes up a full third of the space in the Bubiyan Room and the show deserved a larger auditorium. However, these are all strictly minor quibbles. In the interval a long-term expat said: "We're so lucky to have such high quality musicians here in Kuwait." It's a sentiment with which I heartily agree. The band played with a fine combination of professional skill and amateur enthusiasm which was utterly infectious.

Highlights

One of the highlights of the show, for me, was Brian Mitchell's beautifully understated version of Dire Straits' "Romeo and Juliet." The vocal was touchingly delicate and was accompanied by some lovely guitar work. On the faster numbers, Malcolm MacDonald played some really rockin' sax giving a big band sound out of all proportion to the actual number of musicians.

The dancers, in contrast, were rather amateur and, apart from their final number, lacked conviction. Their hesitancy was in marked contrast to the musicians' skill and conviction. When June Stevenson really let her hair down on numbers like "Burn Down the Mission," nobody noticed the dancers much anyway, her performance is so electrifying. There are two more shows, for details see the What's On column.

Ramadan viewing on KTV 1

RAMADAN viewing would be the best this year, according to Badr Al Mudhaf, director of programmes at Kuwait Television. Admitting that it is "impossible to satisfy" all viewers, Al Mudhaf said: "We'll try to provide something to suit everyone's taste and interest, particularly during Ramadan."

Children's serials return this year after a two-year absence in Ramadan. Madinat Al Riyah — The Windy City — will be shown soon after iftar (breakfast) during Ramadan, expected to start in mid-April.

The Windy City is now being filmed. Ahmed Saleh, Khaled Al Obaid, Huda Hussain, Asmah Tawfiq and Abdul Rahman Al Aqal star.

Khaled Al Obaid.

A number of other serials are also under production for showing in Ramadan. These include Musafer bedoon Hawaiyya (A Traveller Without an ID), featuring Ghanem Al Saleh and Hayat Al Fahad; and Iza'j (Disturbance). Istisarat Ramadan (Ramadan Inquiries) is a religious serial featuring interviews with Muslim scholars of the Awqaf Ministry.

The tradition of Ramadan contests will continue this year as well. This is normally the high spot of Ramadan programmes.

Apart from these several late night variety shows are in the pipeline. These will feature interviews with top Arab performers and singers.

The latest Arabic films and a number of plays will also be screened. Kuwait Television has been asked by viewers to show classic black and white Arabic films.

Al Mudhaf said: "We will try to accommodate them in our programme listings."

Rural revolt is budding in India

By Sheila Tefft

NEW DELHI: Across India's parched countryside, a rural revolt is budding.

The farmers' protest, popularly known as "peasant power," is a symptom of the growing economic ills bedeviling Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi's government. A three-year short-fall of vital monsoon rains has left this largely agricultural nation with strained food supplies and desperate water shortages.

Recently, thousands of farmers held a three-week sit-in at Meerut, 35 miles from here. With growing power and water shortages, mounting debt, and low prices, simmering discontent boiled over.

Prime Minister Rajiv refused to meet their demands. The farmers disbanded, but vowed not to pay taxes and to continue their fight. "We shall disregard whatever this government says and conduct our business ourselves," Mahendra Singh Tikait, the revolt's self-styled leader, told crowds.

Public spending to counter the effects of drought has pushed the government into the red. Prices of food, gasoline, railroad tickets, and telephones have jumped. In contrast to the euphoria surrounding Rajiv's victory in 1984, these price increases are driving the country's double-digit inflation. "They make you wonder if we're headed for a disaster instead of the 21st century,"

Debt
According to the World Bank, however, India's economy is well-managed and its $26 billion foreign debt is not out of control. But warning signals are flashing, economic observers say. In its new budget released last month, the government predicts the deficit for the coming fiscal year will jump by one-third to more than $6 billion. Defence spending is mounting due to the war against Tamil militants in Sri Lanka which is costing the Indian government an estimated $800,000 a day. The government plans to hike taxes to help cover the deficit.

Economic problems threaten to become political headaches if the summer monsoon rains fail again this year, economists say. About 75 per cent of India's people live in rural areas, and one-third of national output comes from agriculture.

Last year, the government was able to tide over the summer's disaster by drawing on a 23-million-ton grain surplus. Since the 1960s, when India was haunted by famine and had to import mountains of food, the country has become self-sufficient, largely through "Green Revolution" technology.

But with food stocks dwindling, India may again have to import food if the dry spell continues. That could be a political disaster for Rajiv, who came to power in 1984 after his mother's assassination and faces fresh elections next year.

"If the economic crisis gets worse, the people won't be able to absorb it. We'll see political turmoil like that of the 1960s," says S.K. Ray, an economist who has written extensively about the country's droughts. "If we have another drought and another bad year, this government is doomed."

Indeed, farmers' ire has been rising in recent years as the cost of hybrid seeds, irrigation, and fertilisers — key components of the vaunted Green Revolution era — have outpaced the prices for crops.

Critics of the movement contend that the participants are rich farmers trying to win better subsidies and cheaper costs from the government. The farmers, who say they can't make ends meet during years of normal rainfall, contend they are under growing pressure from the drought.

Even harder hit are the farm labourers who are increasingly being forced off the land into the cities to find jobs.

Jabbar Singh, a 26-year-old worker, his wife, and children, left their native Rajasthan because there was no farm work. "The livestock were dying, and there wasn't enough drinking water," said Singh who is looking for a construction job in New Delhi. "I had to come here. There is nothing at home."

Political observers say Rajiv will have to move quickly to stem the agrarian unrest. The prime minister, whose government has been buffeted by charges of corruption and a string of election defeats, must retain his hold on key states in the north where the farmers' movement is picking up steam.

"The stability of rural society keeps India going," says Jaswant Singh, a political opponent of the Rajiv government.

"Whenever that stability is disturbed, the whole country is touched by the chaos," Singh says. The Christian Science Monitor News Service.

European Parliament begins to wield power

By Milan Ruzicka

BRUSSELS, Belgium, (AP): Partly by design — and partly, perhaps, by accident — the European Parliament has found itself with a powerful new role in the European Economic Community's international affairs.

To the surprise of even some of its 518 members, the parliament, for years an EEC backwater with little real power, now has a say in how the 12-nation EEC deals with other countries.

It can veto treaties with nations whose policies it dislikes, as it did with an EEC-Israeli trade deal last week. Upset by Israel's treatment of Palestinians, the parliament blocked a $78.5-million trade accord with Israel.

The unexpected vote, after months of delays, was a first for the parliament and an embarrassment for the 12 EEC governments, which had all approved the agreement.

Some members of the European Parliament say the EEC governments may not have realised the huge powers they gave the parliament by amending the EEC's founding Treaty of Rome in 1987.

Treaties
Under the amendment, known as the Single European Act, the EEC can sign international treaties only with "the assent of the European parliament, which shall act by an absolute majority of its members."

Some parliament deputies were amazed to see such power devolve on the parliament, traditionally a body with sharply limited powers that was frequently ignored and sometimes even ridiculed.

"Many of us felt the governments really didn't know what they were doing when they drew up the law," said Piet Dankert, a Dutch socialist and former parliament president.

His British conservative colleague Christopher Prout agrees. The reasons for passage of the amendment, he said, "have never been clear to me."

But mistake or not, the European Parliament must now be consulted on a range of treaties with over 100 nations associated with the EEC.

Without its assent, a treaty cannot take effect.

Endorsement
Dankert said in most cases the treaty ratification procedure likely will amount to a routine endorsement of accords negotiated by the EEC's executive commission and council of ministers. But, he added, there's also a chance that "we now can score some big political points."

The rebuke to Israel, said Dankert, was just such a case.

"The economic effect of the vote will be very limited, but it sent a significant political signal to Israel," he said.

Prout said the vote on Israel was inevitable because of the "repulsive way" it treats Palestinians in the occupied territories.

He said the parliament, which had delayed a vote three times before the rejection, was forced "to face up to its new responsibility, rather than continue using procedural (delaying) tricks."

Prout termed the ratification powers "substantial," even though the legislation doesn't give the parliament the power to write treaties or get involved in the negotiation process.

To Dankert, this is a minor impediment.

Prime Minister looking more confident and powerful than ever

Thatcher: a 20th century revolution

By Maureen Johnson

LONDON, (AP): Far from losing steam after nearly nine years in office, Margaret Thatcher is marching through her third consecutive term as prime minister looking more confident and powerful than ever.

The 62-year-old Conservative party leader has become such a fixture on the political scene, here and abroad, that at times she seems to be parodying the bossy, schoolmarmish image bestowed on her by her critics.

She'll let loose an outburst every so often — "I never did understand men," she complained after an argumentative European summit. She'll chide the United States about balancing its budget and badger her citizens about littering the streets.

She advocates a return to "Victorian values," supports the restoration of the death penalty, has legislated curbs on the promotion of homosexual lifestyles and brandishes the Official Secrets Act with a vigour that makes many critics fear for the freedom of the British media.

Revolution

Now, eight months into a fresh five-year term, Thatcher has governed continuously for longer than any other British prime minister in the 20th century. In the process, she says, she has wrought a revolution. It's a claim that not even her severest critics totally dismiss.

"She has taught us that you don't win... unless you have a clear ideological position," says Roy Hattersley, deputy leader of the Socialistic Labour Party, which went down to its third successive election defeat by Thatcher last June. "We've made authoritarianism look respectable — or, rather, she has."

As the Thatcher revolution

surges on with shake-ups in state education, housing and the once-sacrosanct National Health Service, authoritarianism is the most frequent charge against her.

But polls indicate that Thatcher retains her trump card: a feeling among the United Kingdom's 56 million people that, whether or not they like her policies, no one is offering anything more credible. The disarray in the left-of-centre opposition gives her an unassailable parliamentary majority on just 42 per cent of the popular vote.

Doubts

"She, more powerfully than anyone else, has articulated the moral doubts and yearnings of her age," wrote Peter Jenkins, a leading liberal analyst, in his recent book, "Mrs Thatcher's Revolution."

"For what people wanted, surely, was an end to decline, release from the corrosive sense of failure, a government which governed and a country to begin to be proud of once again."

Thatcher feels her populist, anti-elitist instincts are "absolutely in tune with how people feel... not just in their pockets, but in their bones, in their hearts and in their minds. Deep in their instincts they find what I am saying and doing right."

Curbed

She attributes it all to what she learned from her father, Alfred Roberts, a smalltown grocer.

"My policies are based not on some economic theory, but on things that I and millions like me were brought up with," she has said.

"An honest day's work for an honest day's pay, live within your means, put a nest egg by for a rainy day, pay your bills on time, support the police."

Such is the message of her revolution.

Her laws have curbed the labour unions and nurtured a new breed of entrepreneurs who, like Thatcher, are outsiders to the establishment.

Among the 200 richest Britons, self-made chain store billionaires, computer whiz kids and property tycoons outnumber the landed aristocracy and other old money 2-to-1, according to Money Magazine, a British publication.

Unemployment is down from a peak 12 per cent two years ago to 9.2 per cent, lower than West Germany and France. Inflation hovers around 4 per cent, down from more than 20 per cent in the early Thatcher years.

But not everybody is better off, and much remains unchanged in Thatcher's Britain.

A stubbornly class-conscious society survives with waiting lists for expensive, private high schools swelled by the children of the newly prosperous.

People's accents still matter and are discussed — including Thatcher's because it sounds acquired.

Nine years after a woman became prime minister British women are not noticeably better off. They still do most of the boring low-paid jobs and earn an average of £219.40 ($386).

According to a survey published in February by the state-funded Equal Opportunities Commission, women comprise 60 per cent of bank employees but only 2 per cent of the administrative and managerial staff. Thatcher has never had a woman in her cabinet.

Internationally, Thatcher has turned post-empire Britain into what commentator Brian Walden calls "a medium-sized power — with clout."

People and policies on the line as China's Parliament meets

By Jim Abrams

BEIJING, (AP): Almost 3,000 political elite will gather at the Great Hall of the People on Friday to set the pace and name the overseers of China's economic and political reforms.

The annual meeting of the National People's Congress, China's parliament, also may reveal how deep the divisions are between Communist Party chief Zhao Ziyang and acting Premier Li Peng.

Zhao, 69, the protégé of semi-retired senior leader Deng Xiaoping, is the champion of rapid reform and is willing to take risks to put China's economy on a more market-oriented basis. Li, 59, is regarded as a cautious technocrat who supports the reforms but would limit their scope and slow down their implementation.

Zhao was the star at a major party congress last fall that established guidelines for China into the 21st century. At this congress, however, Li will be on centre-stage, delivering a key report at the opening of the three-week session that will define the nation's immediate goals.

Inflation
Li is expected to sound several conservative themes, including the need for the government to pay more attention to the countryside following three disappointing grain harvests and the belief that controlling double-digit inflation must take precedence over reform of China's inefficient pricing system.

Analysts also will watch how much support Li gives Zhao's ambitious proposal to turn factories along China's coast into processing centres for exports. The plan is controversial because it would allow coastal regions to develop at a far faster pace than the interior.

Open disagreement between Zhao and Li is unlikely. "Five years ago you could talk about reformists and conservatives," said one Asian diplomat. "But today nobody would come out against reform."

The first session of the 7th National Party Congress — each congress sits for five years — will be one of the busiest and most important in years. It will confirm Li as premier, replace Li Xian'an as president, and appoint the vice-president, vice-premiers, congress chairman and new heads of various ministries.

Amend

The 2,970 delegates also will approve government reorganising in which several ministries are to merge or be eliminated, amend the constitution to legalise private businesses and the transfer of land-use rights, and pass several major laws.

Most important is the industrial enterprise law, which gives legal definition to the government's attempts to separate the functions of the owner — the state — and the manager of businesses.

The law gives factory managers the right to run their plants without undue interference from government and party officials, while taking responsibility for profits and losses.

The law, which has been revised 13 times since it first was suggested in 1980, is deemed a necessary forerunner to a proposed law that would outline terms for bankruptcies.

The congress also will vote on whether to make southern China's Hainan Island, a focus of Zhao's coastal development plans, a new province. And it will deliberate legislation on foreign-funded ventures, state secrets and village governments to replace the defunct communes.

Among personnel changes, part of an ongoing campaign by Deng Xiaoping to rejuvenate the nation's aging leadership, several veteran conservatives will step aside while other go-slow reformists will gain important posts.

Influence

Li, named acting premier when Zhao was appointed head of the party last fall, will take over the post held for 27 years by his foster father, Chou En-Lai. He also will head the commission for restructuring the economy, increasing his influence in determining the course of reforms.

Li Xian'an, 78, will end his five-year term in the largely ceremonial post of president. He is likely to replace Deng Yingchao, 84, Chou En-Lai's widow, as chairman of the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference, an advisory body.

Likely to be the next president is Yang Shangkun, 80, a senior military officer, member of the party politburo and friend to Deng Xiaoping.

Yao Yilin, a respected but somewhat conservative economist, is slated to head a powerful economic planning commission to be created out of two existing commissions. Yao, 71, is expected to remain one of five vice-premiers.

The new defence minister, replacing 78-year-old Zhang Aiping, is expected to be Qin Jiwei, 74, former Beijing military region commander and a politburo member.

Resign

Peng Zhen, an 86-year-old conservative who has tried to remove the congress' rubber-stamp image in his five years as chairman, will resign. Vice-Premier Wan Li is considered a likely successor.

The Communist Party remains the source of all major policies and personnel moves, but the congress now has the power and will to debate, delay or revise legislation.

Among the deputies, chosen by provincial people's congresses, one-third are non-party members; 15 per cent come from China's ethnic minorities; 9 per cent from the People's Liberation Army.

US, Soviets keeping tabs on radical Afghan factions

By Richard Sale

WASHINGTON, (UPI): The United States and the Soviet Union, anxious to ensure an orderly Soviet troop withdrawal from Afghanistan, are sharing data on radical mujahedeen factions viewed as a threat to a settlement, administration officials said.

US and Soviet teams also are discussing other ways "to achieve a non-aligned Afghanistan" following a Soviet pullout, these sources said.

Ironically, such manoeuvring may mean curbing US support for the same Islamic rebel factions the administration has so staunchly relied on during the 8 1/2-year-old guerrilla war against Soviet occupation forces, they said.

"We are not making a deal behind anyone's back, nor are we exploiting differences between the mujahedeen, but we are talking with the Soviets about the rebels, an administration source said.

A US official said the administration's first priority is to ensure a Soviet pullout, and it places less importance on the shape of Afghanistan's future government.

Road-block

Intelligence sources said Islamic elements of the mujahedeen are considered the major road-block to a settlement with the Soviets, who say they want to keep the puppet Afghan government in power during a withdrawal to prevent chaos.

Neighbouring Pakistan also is pushing for formation — prior to a Soviet withdrawal — of a coalition interim government that includes the Islamic, US analysts said.

The Pakistanis have their own fears that the radical rebels will otherwise incite a civil war and prevent five million Afghan refugees from returning home, these sources said.

They said the Moscow government also has long-term worries that Islamic fundamentalism will spread into the Soviet Union's Central Asian republics, which border Afghanistan and are inhabited by fast-growing Muslim sects.

The Soviets fear such an Islamic surge would heighten chances of internal unrest and perhaps endanger Russian national unity.

A Congressional staffer, who requested anonymity, also said that a recent group of American visitors to Moscow was "impressed by the degree to which the Russians are alarmed by the thought of an aroused Islamic constituency."

Four of the seven Pakistan-based groups of mujahedeen guerrillas in Afghanistan are radical fundamentalists who either sympathise with the government of Iran or openly are urging an Islamic revolution once the Soviets leave, administration officials said.

The traditional mujahedeen have sought to regain power they enjoyed before the 1979 Soviet invasion. But the fundamentalists now are militarily stronger, primarily because of covert aid from the United States, Pakistan and Saudi Arabia.

State Department officials said the administration faces a dilemma because the radicals could effectively block the traditionalists' attempts to recover their standing. Yet most US military aid for the rebel war has gone to the more effective Islamic elements.

Shift
"By portraying the (radical) rebels as freedom fighters, the Reagan administration has painted itself into a corner," one State Department analyst said.

"Many of these radicals are bandits."

A CIA source, speaking of the rebels, confirmed a shift in the US position, said, "we want to see some groups fed to other groups" — intelligence terminology for neutralising undesirable elements.

A State Department official took a softer stance.

"Obviously there are some people we would find it easier to deal with (after a Soviet withdrawal) than others," he said.

To facilitate reaching an accord with the Soviets, the United States is trying to forge a temporary alliance among the rebel factions, despite their differences, the official said. He said US officials are relying on the Pakistani government to mediate between the various factions.

Asked about the US-Soviet discussions about the mujahedeen, a State Department spokesman declined comment on grounds it is an intelligence matter.

Several administration specialists said they feel the Soviets' fear of a Khmeini-type of government in Kabul is misplaced.

"The circumstances in Iran and Afghanistan are very different," it said.

Such language would seem to preclude another intervention such as the Soviet invasions of Hungary in 1956 or Czechoslovakia in 1968 to protect Soviet interests — policy that was known as the Brezhnev Doctrine after the late Soviet leader — without violating the principles of the declaration.

Principles
"In view of these principles, we could hardly expect the Soviet Union to act in the same way (as in 1956 and 1968)," said Stanislaw Stojanovic, executive secretary of the party's central committee, who added that the language was meant to be multilateral — not bilateral.

The two sides pledged "mutual respect for independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity, equality and non-interference in internal affairs in any form whatsoever," one US official said. In the first place, Afghanistan's fundamentalists follow Sunni Islam, which one expert described as "more relaxed and tribal" than Iran's "more militant" Shiite Islam, the state religion.

Sunni Islam is embraced by the majority of Muslims in all Middle East countries except Iran.

But US officials acknowledged that the Soviet central republics are full of fast-growing Muslim sects, consisting of secret societies called "tarigats" that have a regular chain of command, rites of initiation and remain closed to outsiders.

US intelligence sources reported that as early as a year before last, US-Soviet summit, Soviet KGB officers, many with diplomatic or journalistic cover, scoured Washington seeking advice from former highly placed US Middle East specialists.

The Soviets sought advice in "putting together a system that would protect Soviet interests in Afghanistan after withdrawal, according to one of the Americans interviewed."

This American, a former State Department official, said he replied that the Soviet Union had to learn to deal with regional leaders or leaders of the prominent Afghan factions.

Woo
The Soviets were advised to woo political support in the traditional American fashion by trading "taxes for hospitals and public roads or some other kind of facility," the official said.

The American also said he told the KGB officer, "there had to be a clear division of labour with the Soviets saying, 'we will do this in the cities and you, the families, will do that.'"

But this official said he warned the Soviet representative, "if you try to build a new cadre in Kabul and extend the regime throughout the country, forget it. We'll redouble our aid to the guerrillas and you'll be there for another 100 years. Soviet suffering is in US interests."

An administration official said that similar consultations are continuing. "We are trying to be helpful," he said.

Raymond Garthoff, Soviet specialists at the Brookings Institute, said that there are precedents for such intelligence exchanges.

Garthoff cited a Soviet warning to the United States in 1977 that South Africa was preparing a nuclear test in the Kalahari desert and hotline traffic during the April 1980 US military mission to rescue the hostages in Iran.

Soviet-Yugoslav declaration

Questions over Moscow's intentions

By Patricia Koza

DUBROVNIK, Yugoslavia, (UPI): A joint Soviet-Yugoslav declaration released during Mikhail Gorbachev's first trip to Yugoslavia raises some critical questions about Soviet intentions in eastern Europe.

The declaration, released in this unique resort city of stone and light as Gorbachev and his entourage flew back to Moscow Friday, reaffirmed the principles of sovereignty and non-interference in language that could have major ramifications in the East Bloc.

"Proceeding from the conviction that no one has a monopoly over the truth, the two sides declare that they have no pretensions of imposing their concepts of social development on anyone," said the 12-page document.

The two sides pledged "mutual respect for independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity, equality and non-interference in internal affairs in any form whatsoever," it said.

Egypt asks Lord Carnarvon to give up recently discovered artifacts

Return our heritage or else...

By Mimi Mann

CAIRO, Egypt (AP): Egypt hopes a touch of persuasion can convince the grandson of the man who financed the Tutankhamun expedition to return more than 300 artifacts stashed in the family castle.

Otherwise, said Culture Ministry officials handling the case, expect legal fireworks.

"We can find no record these pieces left Egypt legally," said Zahi Hawass, archaeological adviser for the Culture Ministry. "These items are a part of our heritage. No one can refuse us the right to ask for their return."

Mohammed Salmawy, the ministry's undersecretary of state for foreign cultural relations, agreed.

"These artifacts complete a certain collection we have, and at this moment we're in the first stages of deciding the correct steps to take," he said. "They're not Liz Taylor's diamonds, but they're part of a necklace."

Several ministry officials have spent much of their time working on recovery of the artifacts since the Times of London disclosed their existence this month. Culture Minister Farouk Hosni has vowed to get them back from the Seventh

Earlier this month, the Times of London disclosed a sensational discovery: more than 300 ancient Egyptian artifacts stashed for 60 years in the family castle of the man who financed the Tutankhamun expedition. Now the Egyptian government is hoping that Lord Carnarvon, owner of the castle, may be persuaded gently to return Egypt's heritage, otherwise a long, legal battle may ensue.

Earl of Carnarvon.

Lord Carnarvon's grandfather, the Fifth Earl, financed the 1922 expedition that resulted in Egyptology's most famous discovery, the gold-filled, almost undisturbed tomb of the young Pharaoh Tutankhamun.

The dispute over ownership began after the times, which 65 years ago bought exclusive rights to Egyptologist Howard Carter's discovery, published photographs of some of the newly found relics. They ranged from a painted wooden face of Amenophis III, Tutankhamun's grandfather — to a delicate faience figure of the goddess Isis taken from a mummy's wrappings, outstretched wings spread in her classic pose of protection to a jewellery case with semiprecious stones and amethyst scarabs inside.

Salmawy said in an interview that Yousef Sharara, Egypt's ambassador in London, has talked with Lord Carnarvon about the items. He characterized the atmosphere as "civil, perhaps not friendly, but there is no friction."

He said even though the government is making no threats, "we are in no way relinquishing any rights we have to the artifacts. If these civil contacts don't work, we're ready to resort to a legal way what I'm not at liberty now to divulge. But at this stage, things are not escalating."

As the tale appeared in The Times, the story of the missing Carnarvon cache smacks of Agatha Christie: an aging family butler leads the "astonished" grandson of a treasure seeker to a hoard secreted behind the cupboards.

Just as in any good mystery, the ending is yet to come.

But the case has dampened the magical moment that spell-bound generations of romantics, who imagined what it was like for Carter and his financial backer Lord Carnarvon to peer into the riches-laden afterworld of the boy Pharaoh.

Robbers entered the tomb in southern Egypt's valley of the Kings Necropolis at least twice in antiquity, but it represented more than almost any other tomb the glories of Egypt's pharaonic past. Tourists now file past its golden remnants of past splendour in Cairo's Egyptian museum.

An American Egyptologist in Cairo said he thinks most of the new Carnarvon collection is little more than junk. Salmawy said it's difficult to judge before seeing the collection but that every piece has historical and cultural value.

"Even so-called junk is a national treasure," he said. "Let's face it, any of these items is junk in relation to what we have in the Egyptian museum, but we want to be able to study each artifact."

"We've just seen a few examples in print in The Times."

Salmawy said Egypt made three initial requests to Lord Carnarvon. "We want a complete list of the items because Lord Carnarvon claims he has documents to prove they were taken legally out of Egypt. We want to see the documents he has, and we want him to allow an Egyptian delegation to decide what the artifacts are," he said.

"I pity Lord Carnarvon if all this fuss is mostly about so-called junk."

Last week the English peer was quoted as saying: "I don't expect any serious claim to be made by the Egyptian government as this could involve the major part of my grandfather's collection, which is in the Metropolitan Museum of New York."

Last week, Cairo's state-owned newspaper Al Ahrām published what it said was a brief interview with Lord Carnarvon.

The report said he told the interviewer he would keep the artifacts at his family's Hampshire estate, Highclere castle. Asked if he would sell the pieces to the New York museum as the other pieces were sold, he said: "I will not sell to the Metropolitan Museum or to any other quarter."

Hieroglyphics found in Mexico

By Norman Hammond

ONE of the most important hieroglyphic inscriptions ever found in the New World has come to light in Mexico.

Dating to the second century AD, it has more than 400 signs in an early script, including two precise dates in the Maya calendar, and the figure of a richly-dressed ruler in an elaborate headdress.

The inscription was found late last year at La Mojarra, in the coastal state of Veracruz, on a large stone slab which turned up in a river bed. Now in the Xalapa Museum, the slab is nearly eight feet high and four feet wide, and more than half of one face is taken up by the inscription.

The rest of it is occupied by the standing figure of a man, facing towards the columns of writing. He wears large, round ear-ornaments and a headdress with a great monster mask, with long feathers streaming from the back. The ear-flares and three plaques worn on his belt represent jade, the most precious substance known in ancient Mexico.

The style of the headdress and the powerfully carved face of the man, whose attire shows him to be a ruler, are similar to a monument from the ancient city of Kaminaljuyu, in Guatemala, 400 miles to the east in the territory of the Maya civilisation.

Both this monument, Kaminaljuyu Stela 11, and the fragmentary Stela 10, had been dated by archaeologists to the early centuries AD, but no exact dates were known because the only inscription, on Stela 10, is undeciphered.

The La Mojarra stela has two dates in what is called the Long Count, a Maya calendar beginning in 3114 BC. The earlier is about 13 years before the later, which in terms of the Christian calendar dates to July AD156.

Confirmation of the date comes from a small carving in the Smithsonian Institute in Washington DC, known as the Tuxtla statuette: the human figure with its duck-billed mask has been in the museum since early this century, and was found not far from La Mojarra in the Tuxtla Mountains of Veracruz. The statuette bears a date in the same style, which has been translated as the equivalent of March AD 162.

The Tuxtla figure also has a hieroglyphic inscription, which until now has been unique in style and remains unread. One of the things exciting scholars in the field of ancient writing systems is that the La Mojarra inscription is in the same script and with many of the same signs.

There are more than 400 individual hieroglyphs, arranged in 21 columns which begin above the ruler's head and extend the entire height of the slab in front of him, making this the longest early inscription known from the ancient civilisations of Mexico.

Although it cannot yet be read, its overall similarity to Maya monuments from the area just east of Veracruz suggests that it will contain a genealogy of the ruler and events in his reign such as conquests and alliances.

One of the two dates, of AD 143 and 156, may well refer to his accession. The other could indicate his birth or recognition as heir, at least one famous Maya king, Pacal of Palenque, succeeded to the throne at the age of 12, although this was unusually young and his mother had already acted as regent for some time.

Until now, only short inscriptions, mainly on portable objects such as the Tuxtla statuette, have been known from this Preclassic period of ancient Mexico: the La Mojarra stela shows that a tradition of public monumental art, equal in its urge to inform to that of the later Classic Maya, already existed in Veracruz.

Whether this means that the Maya cultural tradition formerly extended further west, or whether the Maya obtained their ideas from their neighbours, is a topic that will be hotly debated when Professor Fernando Winfield Capitane, director of the Xalapa Museum, presents the inscription at a conference in Texas.

A bastion of male chauvinism has fallen! New York's bridge club of renown, the Cavendish Club, has elected its first woman president, Mrs. Claire Tornay.

A tournament player of considerable skill and a former national titleholder, Mrs. Tornay sat South on this deal from a recent tournament. North's single diamond raise was strong and forcing, and South's jump to four diamonds, by partnership agreement, was Key-Card Blackwood, in which the king of trumps counts as an ace. When she learned that one key card was missing, Mrs. Tornay settled in the small slam.

West led a top-of-nothing spade, solving declarer's problem in that suit. At first glance it might seem that the fate of the contract hinged on the trump finesse. However, declarer realized that a strip and end play, combined with the possibility of dropping a singleton king of trumps, offered a better chance.

She captured the queen of spades with the king and cashed the ace of trumps in the hope of felling the king. When the monarch failed to appear, declarer cashed the high clubs and ruffed a club in hand, crossed to the ace of spades and ruffed another club. The jack of spades was cashed to complete the strip of the black suits, and declarer exited with a trump.

Whichever defender held the king of diamonds would be forced to return a heart to avoid giving a ruff-sluff. Had that defender been East, declarer would simply have had to hope that he was leading away from the king of hearts. As it was, West held the trump king and when he shifted to a heart, declarer was faced with a nasty guess. We might have been inclined to play dummy's queen, but women's intuition triumphed—South inserted the ten from the table and, when East produced the king, the slam was home.

Japan joins World Bank in financing Indian projects

WASHINGTON, March 21, (AP) — The Export-Import Bank of Japan yesterday added a credit of approximately $450 million to $851 million worth of World Bank loans earlier provided for three thermal power and transmission projects in India.

A World Bank announcement said the 62-billion yen cofinancing agreement signed with the World Bank provided united funds, enabling the projects to import equipment from any country.

The three developments covered by the new cofinancing agreement are the second Ramagundam project, which has a $300 million World Bank loan, the second Farakka project, supported with a $300.8 million World Bank loan, and the Rihand transmission project, which has $250 million in World Bank financing.

The announcement said it was the third cofinancing agreement between the World Bank and Japan's Exim Bank under Tokyo's promise of united loans to Asian countries.

Thriving industry cuts UAE dependence on oil

DUBAI, March 21, (Reuters) — The glittering cities of the UAE may be sitting on top of one of the biggest oil lakes on earth, but they are not resting on their economic laurels.

Undeterred by the fierce Iran-Iraq war raging across the Gulf, cargo ships through bustling ports, foreign trade delegations pack hotels and factories churn out an increasingly wide variety of goods.

A senior official of the Abu Dhabi National Oil Company (Adnoc) warned this month that the oil boom years of 1977-1983, which made the country one of the richest per head in the world, may never return.

Production
But the UAE has long ago taken the message to heart. Industrial production, almost non-existent in the early 1970s, is an important sector of the economy and grew eight per cent a year between 1981 and 1986 according to the Emirates Industrial Bank.

Credit fuelling the private sector stood at an all-time high of $10.8 billion at the end of October 1987, against $9.7 billion a year earlier, a Dubai Chamber of Commerce report said.

Government efforts to reduce dependence on the oil sector are "reaping rich dividends", it said. "UAE oil income rose to $8.8 billion in 1987 from seven billion

Opec can overcome market upset

Oil prices will rebound: Nazer

ABU DHABI, March 21, (UPI) — Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Hisham Nazer said today world oil prices would rebound if Opec states adhered to their output quotas and refrained from offering price discounts in a weak oil market.

"Opec at present is passing through the same circumstances it experienced during the same period of last year," Nazer was quoted as saying by the state-run Saudi Press Agency.

But, he added, "there is nothing that would prevent it from overcoming them (circumstances) again this year."

Excessive production by producers inside and outside the 13-member Opec, a mild winter and price discounting have caused a sharp decline in world oil prices during the first quarter of this year.

Prices
Prices have been fluctuating within a $13 to $15 a barrel range, compared with Opec's official benchmark of $18 a barrel.

The Saudi minister, whose country is the world's largest oil exporter and Opec's dominant power, did not indicate whether he supported calls for an emergency meeting of the organisation to stabilise the market.

Oil industry sources said they were awaiting a "major announcement" by Opec's current president, Rilwanu Lukman of Nigeria tomorrow, which they expected to include measures to prop up falling prices.

The next ordinary meeting of the organisation is scheduled in Vienna for June 25.

Nazer said a key to a return to a balance between supply and demand was a strict adherence to production quotas and an end to price discounting.

Stability
However, in an evident call for non-Opec producers to contribute in oil market stability, Nazer said Saudi Arabia was in "constant consultations" with all producers inside and outside Opec to "reach the best means to balance supply and demand and maintain the balance thereafter."

Gulf-based oil industry sources said the kingdom's production has dropped dramatically to around 2.8 million barrels a day during the first week of March, rising to around 3.6 million barrels per day during the second week, compared with an Opec quota of 4.3 million barrels per day.

However, the sources, who closely monitor Saudi production, said the decline did not mean a return to Saudi Arabia's role as a "swing producer."

"I am certain the production will pick up again, as it has done in the past," said a senior Japanese oil executive.

The sources estimated current Opec production between 16.7 to 17 million barrels per day with most of the overproduction coming from Iraq, which has refused a quota that is not equal to Iran's 2.3 million barrels per day.

At its last meeting in December, Opec set a production ceiling of 15.06 million barrels per day for all members except Iraq to stabilise prices at around $18 a barrel.

Iraq's current production is estimated at 2.5 million barrels per day compared with around 2 million barrels per day pumped by Iran.

Saudi bank profits show tentative signs of recovery

BAHRAIN, March 21, (Reuters) — Saudi Arabia's joint-venture banks, hampered by bad and doubtful loans, have shown the first signs of breaking a four-year cycle of slumping profits, but bankers say 1988 still promises to be a difficult year.

Earnings in 1986 fell to the lowest level since the start of the decade, but in past weeks four banks have declared higher 1987 profits and some now feel confident they can set aside lower loan provisions.

"It is a very patchy picture," said one banker. "Many banks carried on leading too long into the Saudi recession and are still paying the price... but a few have come through the worst."

After years of grappling with payments problems on lending to Saudi Arabia's recession-hit private sector, a few of the nine joint-venture banks have now built up provisions of around 25 per cent of loans and the strain on profits is easing.

But bankers caution many banks still look under-provided with loan reserves around 10 per cent, basic earnings are weak and opportunities to tap new business in Saudi Arabia limited.

"There was also a lot of pressure on banks to turn in better results to restore confidence in the banking system," said one Gulf-based banker. "It is difficult to say how cosmetic profit rises are, but there is no doubt some banks are doing better."

Decline
So far seven of the joint-venture banks have published 1987 results. The four reporting a rise in earnings include the largest, Saudi American Bank, which declared an 11.6 per cent gain in net profit to 90.1 million riyals ($24 million).

But Al-Bank Al-Saudi Al-Fransi, or "Saudi French," saw a 32.1 per cent decline and two, Saudi British Bank and United Saudi Commercial Bank (USCB), were in the red.

Bankers say the two joint-ventures still to report may also show a loss — Bank Al-Jazira and the ailing Saudi Cairo Bank which is receiving a 300 million riyal ($80 million) capital injection from the Saudi government in a rescue package.

Bahrain's offshore banks have been hit by non-performing loans to Latin America and set aside heavy provisions in 1987 to boost cover to about 20 per cent of Third World debt.

Saudi Arabia's banks in contrast concentrated their lending during the late 1970s and early 1980s on domestic companies but also ran into problems, with recoveries complicated by disputes over Islamic law and the Western concept of interest payments.

Bankers calculate the average level of provisions at the seven banks which have reported so far has risen to about 13 per cent from 10.3 per cent at the end of 1986. USCB, smallest and youngest of the banks, says it has covered 27 per cent of loans.

Bankers say they are encouraged that the Saudi government appears to be tackling deep-seated problems in the banking system caused by problem loans to the private sector.

Stake
The infusion of funds for Saudi Cairo doubles its capital and is being put up by the government-owned public investment fund in what one banker described as being "tantamount to a government bail-out."

It dilutes the stake of the bank's foreign partner Banque du Caire to 30 per cent from 40 per cent. Saudi Cairo declared a 59.7 million riyal ($16 million) 1986 loss, the biggest ever for a joint-venture.

A government-backed tribunal set up under the Saudi Arabian Monetary Agency — the Central Bank — to hear loan disputes between banks and debtors has often found in favour of banks since it began hearings in earnest at the end of last year.

Bankers also say government payments to contractors have speeded up in the past few months, allowing some private sector companies to service their debt more easily.

Bankers say Saudi American, owned 60 per cent by Saudi nationals and 40 per cent by Citibank, is now probably over the worst of its problems with non-performing loans.

Arab National Bank has also managed to steer clear of problem loans and increased its 1987 net profit by 32.3 per cent to 201.2 million riyals ($54 million).

Farm subsidies issue eludes breakthrough

KONSTANZ, West Germany, March 21, (Reuters) — Trade ministers from 30 nations failed in weekend talks to make significant progress towards an agreed reduction of farm subsidies.

"Agriculture was one of the most difficult points," West German Economic Minister Martin Bangemann said after the talks at the lakeside resort of Konstanz ended today.

But he told a news conference that progress was made on other trade issues and the ministers would meet again in Pakistan in October. "The discussions were a substantial step in the right direction," he said.

The informal talks reviewed progress in the Uruguay round of free trade negotiations begun in September 1986 under the auspices of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

The four-year negotiations to try to remove trade barriers in 14 sectors reach their halfway point in December with a formal ministerial meeting in Montreal.

Bangemann said a proposal by the United States that all farm subsidies be abolished over 10 years from 1990 was unrealistic.

The United States and several other nations argue that EEC farm subsidies result in the world market being swamped with cut-price farm produce.

Most participants at the Konstanz talks thought it would be wrong to take the agriculture issue of the Montreal agenda, Bangemann said. "We are agreeing on some short-term subsidy cuts... but it's impossible to agree on everything by the mid-term review (in Montreal)," he added.

Bangemann said the talks also covered tropical products, where the EEC proposes cutting or abolishing some duties in return for fewer trading restrictions by developing countries.

He said there was a willingness to make progress in this sector in Montreal.

Bangemann said the meeting discussed the political importance of GATT and decided the Geneva-based body should strengthen its role.

"Our goal is to stress the fact that trade and economic progress are inter-related," he said. "We are dealing with something vital for the development of all countries."

Investcorp arranges acquisition of Burnham Service Corporation

INVESTCORP has announced that it has arranged the acquisition of Burnham Service Corporation ("Burnham"), a US publicly traded company for total consideration of approximately $160 million. The acquisition group consists of affiliates of Investcorp and members of senior management of Burnham.

The group closed the tender offer upon receipt of over 98 per cent of Burnham's outstanding shares. Burnham, headquartered in Columbus, Georgia, is a leading US company providing distribution, transportation, and information systems services for major corporations throughout the United States and Canada. The company emphasises the distribution and transportation of high-value electronics equipment, including computers and office equipment. Burnham's revenues have grown from $13 million in 1978 to more than $100 million in 1987. The company operates 80 branches throughout North America and has over 1,000 employees, 75.7 million cubic feet of warehouse space, and a fleet of over 2,000 trucks and trailers. The principal financial institution participating in the financing of the acquisition is The Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A. ("Chase"). Chase is providing up to $66 million in loans to finance the tender offer and has committed to provide $102 million of long-term funding to Burnham through a syndicated loan facility which it will lead and arrange.

Ray E. Crowley, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Burnham, said that: "As managers/owners, we look forward to the challenges and opportunities presented by this change in ownership. We feel it will ensure Burnham's continued level of superior service to its clients and dedication to the development of its employees." Savio Tung, a member of the Management Committee of Investcorp, praised the leadership of Crowley and said that Investcorp is delighted with the opportunity to join in a partnership with the management of Burnham to acquire the company. "My colleague, Wayne A. Stabile, and I have worked extensively with Ray and his team on this transaction and are very impressed with all aspects of Burnham."

Plan to strengthen trade ties

AMMAN, March 21, (Reuters) — Turkish Minister of State for Finance, Trade and Planning Yusuf Ozal flew home today following talks in Jordan on how to strengthen economic cooperation, the state-run news agency Petra said. Ozal, who arrived here on Friday, discussed with Crown Prince Hassan, Prime Minister Zaid Al-Rifa'i and senior officials, ways to step up cooperation over economic, finance, electricity and irrigation projects, Petra said. His talks with Energy Minister Hisham Al-Khatib also covered plans to set up a joint committee together with Egypt and Syria to study the possibilities of linking the electricity grids of the four countries.

Petra said Ozal and Minister of Water and Irrigation Ahmed Dhukhamb assessed prospects for a water pipeline project to be set up between Turkey, Jordan, Syria, Saudi Arabia, Iraq and the Gulf states. The project, in which Turkey would supply water to the Arab countries, depends on the outcome of a feasibility study currently being undertaken by a group of consultant companies, ministry sources told Reuters.

KAC profits total KD3m

THE board chairman and managing director of Kuwait Airways Corporation (KAC) Ahmed Al Meshari was quoted here yesterday as saying that the corporation in the current fiscal year has made a profit of more than KD3 million.

He told a local daily that the wise policy of the corporation which concentrated on limiting expenditure and operations, is behind that profit and success. Regarding the number of Kuwaitis in the corporation, Meshari said that the percentage of Kuwaiti employees in KAC will reach 57 per cent in 1988/89, noting that the number is considered high in the country. He added that the corporation will shortly draw up a plan to introduce a new air fleet for the 1990s and the beginning of the next century. Hailing the cooperation between the three Gulf Airways, Meshari said that there is strong cooperation, noting that they have established joint holding companies to set up joint projects, the Islamic cuisine in London, to operate soon, is the latest such joint venture, he added. The chairman, meanwhile noted fixing prices of air tickets, as stipulated in the recent law organising travel agencies in Kuwait, has been suspended.

Latin 'debt strategy has turned corner'

CARACAS, March 21, (Reuters) — The Reagan administration believes that the strongest economic weapon of the Latin American debtor countries — the debt moratorium — has been tried and discredited, US government officials said yesterday.

The officials, attending the annual meeting of the Inter-American Development Bank (IADB), said they believed the debt crisis had turned a critical corner and that the strategy unveiled by Treasury Secretary James Baker two and a half years ago and refined since had been more successful than was generally recognised.

The officials said Brazil had tried cutting off payments and in the end concluded that the moratorium carried too high a cost by shutting off new assistance.

Development
"That is an enormously positive development for the debt strategy," one source said. In the past there had been deep fear that the debtor countries, overwhelmed by nearly $400 billion in foreign debt — much of it to commercial banks — would form a organisation and renounce their obligations. But the sources said that the decision by Brazil to renew payments on its debt to commercial banks and to seek a new economic programme with the International Monetary Fund (IMF) suggested this weapon had been tried and found wanting.

The sources said Brazil is seeking a three-year programme with the IMF rather than a much shorter agreement that has been used extensively since the debt crisis began in 1982.

They suggested this indicated Brazil was making a long-term commitment to solving its problems.

At the same time, the sources said that Argentina, despite major problems, had been showing economic discipline and Mexico had been doing well.

They said the lack of success of Mexico's so-called bonds-for-debt deal was another indication the banks preferred to continue holding on to the Mexican debt, in part because they planned to continue a long-term relationship with the country.

Other US officials attending the conference, including Assistant Treasury Secretary David Mulford, said in interviews with Reuters that a global solution to the debt strategy was not needed. "The case for that is even weaker than it was a few months ago," Mulford said.

The US officials attending the meeting also made it clear they will stand in the way of any new funding for the Inter-American Development Bank until it agrees to profound changes in its lending procedures.

The United States wants the bank to give more voting power to the countries that provide the funds, allowing Washington a virtual veto over loans.

The dispute has held up approval on about $23 billion in new funding, critically needed by Latin countries.

A brief statement by Allen Wallis, US undersecretary of state for economic affairs, torpedoed any hope that the two-year-old funding dispute between the United States and the Latin American debtor countries would be resolved quickly.

Position
"We will not change our position this year, next year or the year after," Wallis said as he arrived on Saturday in Caracas for the bank's annual meeting, which opens formally today.

"It is not just the Treasury, the State Department, the White House. It is the entire administration that is absolutely firm in the position that the country is taking," he said.

London Stock Market Report

U.K. SHARES TAKEN LOWER BY WALL STREET DROP
LONDON, MARCH 21, REUTER - SHARE PRICES REACHED NEW LOWS FOR THE DAY IN THIN MID-AFTERNOON TRADING AS THE MARKET WAS DRAGGED DOWN FOLLOWING A DECIDEDLY WEAK OPENING IN NEW YORK.
WALL STREET LOST AROUND 20 POINTS IN THE FIRST HALF-HOUR OF TRADING, HIT BY A LOWER U.S. BOND MARKET AND AN EASIER DOLLAR.
EARLIER, U.K. SHARES HAD DRIFTED DOWN IN LACKLUSTRE TRADING WITH EX-DIVIDEND STOCKS AND THE LONG THREE-WEEK ACCOUNT DISCOUNTING INVESTOR INTEREST, DEALERS SAID.

AT 1530 GMT, THE FTSE 100 INDEX STOOD 13.2 POINTS LOWER AT 1,462.3. THE INDEX HAD REACHED A LOW OF 1,461.1 AT 1450 GMT AFTER A HIGH ON THE DAY OF 1,463.3 SHORTLY AFTER THE OPENING.
DEALERS SAID THAT DESPITE WEEKEND PRESS COMMENT PREDICTING A FURTHER CUT IN U.K. BASE RATES, HOPES FOR ANOTHER REDUCTION TO EIGHT PCT FROM THE 8-1/2 PCT LEVEL ESTABLISHED LAST WEEK FADED FAST. STERLING REMAINED CONFINED IN A NARROW RANGE, UNDER THE 3.10 MARKS LEVEL.

MONEY MARKET INTEREST RATES WERE STEADY WITH THE KEY THREE MONTHS INTERBANK RATE AT 8-11/16 9/16 PCT AND DEALERS SAYING THE MARKET WAS WAITING FOR A LEAD FROM THE POUND.

LEADING INTERNATIONAL STOCKS LOSS GROUND WITH THE LOWER DOLLAR, HOWEVER, WITH GLAXO DROPPING 22P TO 1,061 AND ICI 15P TO 1,043. REUTERS WAS DOWN 10P AT 538 AND WELLCOM LOST 4P TO 465.

London Gold

LONDON, MARCH 21, REUTER - GOLD BULLION CLOSED HIGHER THIS AFTERNOON ON ACTIVE GENERAL BUYING WHICH LARGELY REFLECTED FIRMER CRUDE OIL PRICES. GOLD CLOSED AT 450.00/450.50 DLRS AN OUNCE, UP FROM FRIDAY'S FINAL QUOTE OF 443.25/443.75 DLRS AND TODAY'S AFTERNOON FIX OF 449.25 DLRS.

A WEAKER DOLLAR, CONTINUING POLITICAL TENSION IN CENTRAL AMERICA, LOWER BOND PRICES AND A FALL IN WALL STREET'S DOW JONES INDEX ALL HELPED GOLD'S ADVANCE TODAY, DEALERS SAID.

GOLD BUYING WAS SEEN PARTICULARLY STRONG JUST AHEAD OF THE NYMEX OPENING THIS AFTERNOON, WHICH SHOWED A STRONG RISE IN CRUDE OIL AND PRODUCTS.

London Money Market

LONDON, MARCH 21, REUTER - THE MONEY MARKET WAS QUIETER THAN ON MOST DAYS LAST WEEK AND, IN THE ABSENCE OF ANY LEAD FROM THE FOREIGN EXCHANGES, RATES WERE STATIC, DEALERS SAID.

THE BANK OF ENGLAND CUT ITS INTERVENTION RATES BY HALF A POINT LAST THURSDAY IN A MOVE INTERPRETED AS AN ATTEMPT TO HOLD DOWN STERLING AFTER IT MOVED ABOVE 3.10 MARKS.

BUT SOME OPERATORS ARE LOOKING FOR THE POUND TO FIRM AGAIN IN THE SHORT TERM, PERHAPS MOVING AS HIGH AS 3.15 MARKS. THIS NIGHT PROMPT ANOTHER CUT IN INTEREST RATES, BUT OPERATORS IN THE MONEY MARKET SEEM UNWILLING TO PUSH LEVELS AGGRESSIVELY LOWER UNTIL CURRENCY PRESSURE CLEARLY EMERGES, DEALERS SAID.

Tokyo Stock Market Report

TOKYO STOCKS CLOSE HIGHER IN ACTIVE TRADE

TOKYO, MARCH 18, REUTER — SHARE PRICES CLOSED HIGHER IN ROBUST TRADE, ALTHOUGH OPTIMISM FOLLOWING NEWS OF A SMALLER-THAN-EXPECTED U.S. JANUARY TRADE DEFICIT WAS LATER TEMPERED BY COMMENTS BY BANK OF JAPAN GOVERNOR SATOSHI SUMITA THAT THE STOCK MARKET WAS RISING TOO QUICKLY, BROKERS SAID.

"SUMITA'S COMMENTS TOOK THE STEAM OUT OF THE MARKET," SAID BROKER ROBERT KARR OF NEW JAPAN SECURITIES.

THE NIKKEI INDEX ROSE 37.97 POINTS, OR 0.36 PCT, TO 25,966.26, AFTER BRIEFLY TOPPING 26,000 IN MORNING TRADE. IT CLIMBED 167.86 POINTS ON THURSDAY. RISES LED FALLS FIVE TO FOUR IN TURNOVER OF 1.2 BILLION SHARES AGAINST 1.1 BILLION.

SECURITIES HOUSE, COMMUNICATIONS, NON-LIFE INSURANCE, BANK, ELECTRICAL, PHARMACEUTICAL, GAS, RAILWAY/BUS AND SHIPBUILDING ISSUES ADVANCED. CONSTRUCTION, CREDIT/LEASE, WAREHOUSE, TEXTILE AND SERVICE SHARES LOST GROUND.

INITIAL MARKET RESPONSE TO THE U.S. JANUARY TRADE DEFICIT OF 12.44 BILLION DLS WAS SOMEWHAT SUBDUED, ALTHOUGH THERE WAS ENOUGH BUYING ENTHUSIASM TO TEMPORARILY PUSH THE NIKKEI INDEX ABOVE THE 26,000-POINT LEVEL FOR THE FIRST TIME SINCE OCTOBER 16, BROKERS SAID. THE MARKET PLUNGED ON OCTOBER 20.

MARKET FORECASTS OF THE U.S. TRADE SHORTFALL HAD RANGED FROM 13 BILLION TO 14 BILLION DLS.

"GIVEN THAT THE TRADE FIGURES WERE GOOD, THE MARKET IS NOT PERFORMING TOO STRONGLY," A BROKER SAID. "A LOT OF BUYING HAS ALREADY BEEN DONE IN ANTICIPATION OF GOOD NUMBERS."

THE NIKKEI INDEX HAD RISEN 438.78 POINTS OVER THE PREVIOUS THREE SESSIONS, AND BROKERS NOTED THAT A GREAT DEAL OF BUYING ENERGY HAD SIMPLY DRIED UP. THURSDAY SAW THE NIKKEI INDEX RISE TO PRE-CRASH LEVELS.

BANK OF JAPAN GOVERNOR SATOSHI SUMITA WAS QUOTED IN THE LATE MORNING AS TELLING A CABINET MEETING THAT THE RECENT RISES IN TOKYO STOCKS MAY HAVE BEEN TOO FAST, AND THIS DAMPENED INVESTOR ENTHUSIASM IN THE AFTERNOON.

Hong Kong Market Report

HONG KONG, MARCH 21, REUTER — PRICES OF BLUE CHIPS CLOSED BARELY CHANGED WHILE SOME SECOND LISTERS ENJOYED SUBSTANTIAL GAINS, BROKERS SAID.

THE HANG SENG INDEX ENDED THE DAY 4.8 POINTS LOWER AT 2,602.80 AND THE BROADER BASED HONG KONG INDEX SLIPPED 2.15 POINTS TO 1,705.24.

TRADING WAS SLOWER ON TOTAL TURNOVER OF 909.47 MLN H.K. DLS AGAINST 1.48 BILLION LAST FRIDAY.

A BROKER WITH A BRITISH SECURITIES HOUSE SAID, "THE MARKET MOVED SIDEWAYS, WITH INVESTORS SWITCHING TO BLUE CHIPS WHICH HAVE NOT YET ANNOUNCED THEIR RESULTS."

Saudis to increase capacity of pipeline to Red Sea

NICOSIA, Cyprus, March 21, (AP): Saudi Arabia will increase the capacity of a pipeline transporting crude oil from fields on the Gulf to a port on the Red Sea by 55 per cent, an oil newsletter reported today.

Expansion of the cross-country facility to 5 million barrels a day "will make Saudi Arabia virtually independent of the Gulf for its crude oil exports, if the need arises," the Middle East Economic Survey reported.

The pipeline presently has a capacity of 3.2 million barrels a day.

Expansion

The publication, citing authoritative Saudi sources, said the expansion will be accomplished entirely by expanding and upgrading pumping facilities and will not require laying of new pipe. Bids for the project were invited to be submitted by mid-March.

No completion date was given. Saudi Arabia's exports are currently about 4 million barrels a day, according to a production quota set by the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries, though its production capacity is more than double this amount.

The newsletter said the Saudi project substantially upgrades the Red Sea as one of the world's oil exporting centres.

Iraq sends about 1 million barrels a day across Saudi Arabia to the Red Sea at present and is expanding the pipeline network to a capacity of 1.6 barrels a day by September, 1989.

"A plan for a pipeline linking Kuwait to the Red Sea coast of Saudi Arabia is also reported to be under consideration," the Middle East Economic Survey reported.

Unesco chief acts to cut expenditure

HARARE, March 21, (Reuters): Unesco director-general Federico Mayor said today that he had introduced tough austerity measures to control the organisation's spending.

The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation had been criticised for alleged financial mismanagement under former director-general Mahatar M'Bow.

Mayor, who took over last year, told an airport news conference he had reduced the number of meetings, slashed paperwork and cut official trips.

He said the Unesco general conference had asked him to make economies of $2 million between November 16 and December 31 last year to avoid a deficit.

Measures

"And this we made because I adopted very sharp measures of austerity concerning meetings that have been reduced in number and length by 25 per cent and by reducing all kinds of documentation by 50 per cent."

"I also adopted some measures concerning travel and all the activities of the organisation have been sharply reduced," he said.

Asked about members who have withdrawn from Unesco, Mayor said he had written to them asking them to return.

The United States and Britain left Unesco complaining the organisation had come under strong left-wing influence by Third World members.

Dollar eases

Oil prices firmer, gold gains

LONDON, March 21, (Reuters): Oil prices rose briskly today and the price of gold followed them up as investors sensed a whiff of inflation in the air.

Crude from the North Sea Brent field, a good barometer of the international spot market, changed hands as high as $15.35 a barrel for loading in May — up 40 cents from Friday.

US crude oil futures jumped to $17.

Gold was fixed for the afternoon in the London bullion market at $449.25 an ounce and was later quoted above $450. That was $7 above Friday's price.

Boosted

Traders cited various factors for a rebound in oil prices which have been weak lately because of an oversupply.

News that Saudi Arabia was consulting other producers helped the price, they said.

New York traders said crude oil futures were boosted by the escalation of the tanker war in the Gulf over the weekend.

Also, the market awaited a news conference on Tuesday by Nigerian Oil Minister Rilwanu Lukman, the president of Opec, amid speculation that may be followed by a meeting of the organisation's ministerial price committee.

Easier

Oil Minister Arturo Hernandez Grisanti of Venezuela did not rule out such a meeting to consider action to support prices.

Among stock markets, Tokyo was closed for Japan's Spring Equinox Holiday while Wall Street showed early declines which took the Dow Jones industrial average down 24 points to 2,064.

Oil Minister Arturo Hernandez Grisanti of Venezuela did not rule out such a meeting to consider action to support prices.

Among stock markets, Tokyo was closed for Japan's Spring Equinox Holiday while Wall Street showed early declines which took the Dow Jones industrial average down 24 points to 2,064.

New York analysts cited an

New York traders said crude oil futures were boosted by the escalation of the tanker war in the Gulf over the weekend.

Also, the market awaited a news conference on Tuesday by Nigerian Oil Minister Rilwanu Lukman, the president of Opec, amid speculation that may be followed by a meeting of the organisation's ministerial price committee.

JUNIOR TIMES

ARAB TIMES, TUESDAY, MARCH 22, 1988

Dear Junior Readers,

We all like to receive letters from our relatives or friends. It is sometimes, however, less of a joy to write letters.

Take a few minutes from your free time and write a letter to a friend or relative that you haven't written for a while. You don't need to write several pages for them to appreciate it—just a few lines to let them know you are thinking about them.

Letters mean a lot to you. Send a letter to someone you care about, knowing it will mean a lot to them, too.

Aunt Barbara

Happy birthday

Omar Hanson was three years old on Saturday, March 23. Best wishes Omar from your family and friends.

I just paint what I see.

HAVE you heard of the brave little tailor who killed seven at one blow?

"Seven what?" you ask — and a good question, too.

For nobody else ever asked, "Seven what?" — which goes to show how much smarter you are than anybody else in this story.

Except, perhaps, for the little tailor. But let's see about that.

ONE day a little tailor was sitting and stitching away on a fine satin coat for the mayor. Down the street there came an old woman, crying jam for sale.

"Jam for sale! Fine jam for sale! Fine, sweet, red strawberry jam for sale!" she cried.

And that was the turning point in the little tailor's life. For it was almost dinner-time, and he was very hungry. Strawberry jam — that sounded wonderful! The little tailor stepped to his doorway, bought some jam, and spread it on a thick slice of bread.

"But first," he thought, "I must finish this sleeve. And there's no use getting my hands sticky."

So he put the bread on the table and went back to his work. He stitched the sleeve of the mayor's coat into the armhole good and tight. There! It was done. And he hung the coat carefully over the back of a chair.

But when he went to pick up his bread, what did he see? Buzzing and walking around on the jam was a whole army of flies!

Angrily, the little tailor raised his hand and brought it down. SLAM!

Ugh — what a mess! But the flies were dead, every last one. And the little tailor counted them: one, two, three, four, five, six, seven. Seven at one blow!

"Now that," said the little tailor, "is really something!"

The brave little tailor

That evening the little tailor took a piece of cloth and made it into a belt. He stitched on it in bright red letters the words SEVEN AT A BLOW.

And no one can say, "he said, 'that isn't the absolute truth.'"

When he put on the belt and looked at himself in the mirror, the little tailor saw at once what a handsome and brave man he was. Much too handsome indeed to be a tailor.

Seven at a blow — why, such a fellow should be out in the world killing dragons and being a hero!

So the little tailor locked up his tailor shop and set out to find some adventures. He had not walked more than two miles when a messenger from the king ran up to him. After all, you cannot go out into the world wearing a belt with SEVEN AT A BLOW written on it and not expect people to hear about it! So of course the little tailor was brought to the king.

"Seven at a blow!" cried the king, when the little tailor had finished bowing before him. "So it's true, what people have been telling me?"

"Yes, Sire," answered the little tailor. "It is the absolute truth."

"Then you are the man we need," said the king. "Do you suppose you could get rid of the two dreadful giants who live in the Northern Woods and are scaring all the people in my kingdom?"

"I suppose I could," said the little tailor. "Just give me a sword and show me where they are."

So the king's men rode with the little tailor to the edge of the Northern Woods where the giants lived. And there the king's men were quite glad to leave him.

The little tailor had not walked more than a mile into the woods when, tromp-tromp, tromp-tromp! — the giants were coming!

What to do? "Now think hard," the little tailor said to himself.

"But while you're thinking, you could at least be climbing a tree." So he scrambled up the nearest tree and hid in its branches.

The giants were as ugly as the tailor thought they would be. Even uglier. But they were something else, too. They were sleepy. And when they came to the tree where the little tailor was hiding, they yawned and stretched and lay down to take a nap.

As they slept, the little tailor picked a pine cone from the tree and dropped it — PLOP! — onto one giant's nose.

Wump! The giant woke up and kicked the other giant. "Stop that!" he roared.

"Stop what?" asked the second giant. Then the little tailor dropped another cone — PLUNK! — right in the first giant's eye.

"Stop THAT!" he bell-owed.

In a wink they were both up and at it, fighting so that the whole forest trembled with the noise they made. The tree the little tailor was hiding in shook until he almost fell out of it.

Finally each giant ripped up a tree, roots and all — but not the tree the little tailor was in — and they hit each other until they both fell senseless to the ground.

The little tailor climbed down and ran each of them through with his sword. Then he brought the king's men to drag the bodies home.

"Now you shall have your reward!" cried the king. And indeed there was a bag of gold waiting at the foot of the throne.

"But first — do you suppose you could do something about the ferocious wild boar that has been causing so much trouble in the Southern Woods?"

"I suppose I could," said the little tailor. For after all, hadn't he killed a unicorn and two giants, not to mention the seven at a blow? And no one could say that wasn't the absolute truth!

So the king's men rode with the little tailor to the edge of the Southern Woods where the boar lived. And there they were quite glad to leave him.

He had not walked more than a quarter mile into the woods when — snort, snort! — there came the boar. And what a beast it was! The little tailor took one look and turned pale.

What to do? "It's not in the least sleepy," thought the little tailor. "And it certainly can't pin itself to a tree — and I haven't any time to think at all!"

So the little tailor simply turned and ran. And he ran and ran, with the boar right behind him, until he saw a little hut in the woods. Into the hut he ran — but before he could shut the door, the boar was in the hut as well.

With a wild look around, the little tailor spied a little window, just his size. Out he jumped and ran around the hut to the door. SLAM! — he shut the door, and SNAP! — he made the padlock fast. And the boar, who was much too big to go out the window, was trapped inside.

Then the little tailor brought the king's men to take the boar home alive. "And now you shall have your reward!" cried the king. And indeed there were now three bags of gold at the foot of the throne.

"But there is something troubling the kingdom in the Western Woods. So first, do you suppose you could..."

"I'm sure I could," said the little tailor — whatever it is. After all, haven't I captured the wild boar and killed two giants and a unicorn, not to mention the seven at a blow?

"But I think I left the mayor's coat hanging over the back of a chair in my shop. It is high time for me to go home and deliver it. So if you don't mind, Sire, I'll take my reward and go."

Which is exactly what he did.

Back home he went, carrying three heavy bags of gold. And when he got back to his little shop, there indeed was the mayor's coat, hanging over the back of a chair.

The little tailor took off his belt and hung it on a nail on the wall — where it may be yet, unless he has moved it — and he lived happily and very comfortably ever after.

As for whatever was troubling the kingdom in the Western Woods, it is probably still there.

Science corner

Grasses are important plants in the world. Wheat, oats and barley are all kinds of grasses. These food grasses are called cereals. Rye, maize and rice are also cereals. The seeds of these cereals provide food for people all over the world.

The seeds of wheat, or wheat grains, are ground into flour. From flour we make bread and cakes. Oat grains are ground to make oatmeal. We eat porridge made of oatmeal. From barley, malt for making beer is obtained. Cornflakes are made from the grains of maize.

Grasses GRASSES provide food for many of the animals which give us meat. Cows and sheep like to eat grass very much.

Grasses are important in another way. Growing almost everywhere, grass stops the soil being washed away when it rains on hillsides and steep slopes.

Asia

Where to find the pangolin This very strange mammal lives in the dense equatorial jungles of Asia and is common in the islands of Malaysia. Another type of pangolin makes its homes in the forests of Africa.

The pangolin is a shy, harmless, nocturnal animal with a long body up to a metre in length which resembles the anteater. It has a small head, short legs and a thick tail which is always curled up like a question mark. The skin of its throat and the underparts of the body is soft, but the rest of the pangolin's body is covered in hard, horny, yellowish-brown scales which are so made that the pangolin can roll itself up into a ball when it is frightened or in danger.

The name 'pangolin' comes from a Javanese word meaning 'the animal that rolls up into a ball'. The pangolin, which has no teeth uses its long, sticky, snake-like tongue to scoop up ants and termites, insects that provide its only food. The pangolin also has very strong claws on its forefeet, but it uses these only for tearing down anthills to force the insects out into the open ground.

Magic tricks

Foldaway

The illusion: A borrowed coin is placed on a piece of paper, which is then folded and placed on another paper. Both papers are folded into a third paper. When they are unfolded, the coin has vanished and in its place is an IOU!

The preparation: You need five sheets of plain paper. Cut one into an 8-1/2" square. Cut two into 6-1/2" squares. Cut two others into 4-1/2" squares.

Take the largest piece and 2" up from the bottom edge, fold the edge up toward the centre (1). Fold the top edge all the way down to meet the bottom crease (2). About 2-1/4" in from the left edge, fold that edge over toward the right (3). Then fold the right edge over to meet the left crease (4).

In the same way, the two smallest pieces are folded up 1/2" from the bottom, and the top edge brought down to meet the bottom crease; then over 3/4" from the left edge, with the right edge folded over to the left crease. Take one of the middle-sized pieces and, at a point 1-1/2" from the bottom edge, fold the bottom edge up toward the centre. Fold the top edge down to meet the bottom crease. At a point 1-1/2" in from the left edge fold it over to the right, and then fold the right edge all the way to the left crease. Do the same with the other middle-sized piece and then glue them back to back. As you do so, make sure that the creases of the smaller flaps are together (5).

Open the two sides of the middle-sized sections and put one of the smallest sections in each one. However, each of the smallest sections is turned over so its solid back is uppermost when you fold the middle section over it. The middle section is then folded inside the large section.

Azinger runs away with Classic title

ORLANDO, Florida, March 21. (Reuters) American Paul Azinger fired a brilliant five-under-par 66 yesterday to run away from the field and capture the $750,000 Bay Hill Classic with a 13-under-par 271 total.

Azinger, who began the round one shot ahead of compatriot Tom Kite, duelled with his nearest competitor throughout the first 12 holes before finally pulling away to a five-shot win despite a final hole bogey.

For Azinger it was his fourth career title and with it went a first prize cheque for $135,000.

He led by a single shot through six holes, but recorded birdies on six of the next eight holes to pull away from Kite who finished at eight-under-par 276 and earned $81,000.

Three times in that stretch, Azinger answered Kite's birdies with one of his own and he salted away the win by chipping in from 30 feet on the 14th hole for a birdie while Kite was struggling to a bogey four.

David Frost of South Africa, second here last year, finished in a tie for third place with American Andrew Magee at four-under-par 280.

Closed

Frost finished the day with a two-under-par 69 over the 7,100 yard Bay Hill course while Magee closed with an even par 71.

Don Pooley of the United States, who made a million dollar hole-in-one here last year, was fifth at three-under-par 281 while defending champ and compatriot Payne Stewart finished in a tie for sixth place at two-under-par 282.

Greg Norman of Australia tied for 11th place with Americans Dave Barr, Ben Crenshaw and Griff Rudolph. Norman had a final round of four-under-par 67 at 283 total.

Briton Sandy Lyle was next with a 284 total while compatriot Ian Woosnam and Japan's Tommy Nakajima were two shots further back at 285.

Davies captures Tucson Open

TUCSON, Arizona, March 21. (Reuters) Laura Davies for Britain birdied the final hole to snap a tie with American Robin Walton and win the $300,000 LPGA Tucson Open golf tournament yesterday.

Davies started the day with a two-stroke lead over Patty Sheehan of the United States and by the fourth hole had stretched that lead to five shots.

Davies birdied the first three holes but ran into trouble on the sixth with a bogey and finished the front nine with a bogey.

She continued to slide with a bogey on the 10th and 17th holes and went to the 18th tied with Walton.

Walton had trouble on the front nine making the turn at two-over-par. But she got hot on the back nine making birdies on the 13th, 14th, 16th and 17th to tie for the lead.

Oxford triumph

OXFORD Cricket Club scored their 10th consecutive win when they defeated Diamond Cricket Club by 55 runs in a friendly match at the Kuma ground on Friday.

Oxford, batting first, scored 190 for the loss of seven wickets. Zahid was the top scorer with 80. Ali hit 42 and Tahir 38.

In reply, Diamond were all out for 135. Afzal and Liaquat were the top scorers with 39 and 29 respectively. Tahir and Ali took four wickets each.

UNDISPUTED CHAMPION FINISHES FIGHT IN 2ND ROUND

Tyson KO's Tubbs to retain world title

TOKYO, March 21. (Reuters) Undisputed world heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson knocked out Tony Tubbs in the second round of their title fight in Tokyo today to retain his title.

Tyson, 21, felled the older and heavier Tubbs with a ferocious left hook two minutes and 54 seconds into the second round of the fight in front of 51,000 people at Tokyo's Big Egg stadium.

It was Tyson's 34th victory and his 30th knockout. He is still unbeaten.

The three judges, one American and two Japanese, scored the first round as a draw. But in the second round, Tyson suddenly over-powered Tubbs, 30, with a series of well-placed punches to the head and body.

Took

Tyson is estimated to have earned between $5 million and $10 million from the fight, while Tubbs took home $500,000.

Asked later how he felt, Tyson said: "It was just another fight. I was hoping to get it over with quick."

"Tubbs was fast but I avoided the punches and came back at him," he added.

The outcome had been widely expected because of Tubbs's consistent problems with weight.

At every public appearance, he looked to be losing the battle of the bulge and by yesterday's weigh-in it was evident he had taken a dive on the dieting front.

The bout, the first heavyweight title fight to be staged in Japan since 1973, looked like it might be a good fight, for exactly one round.

Tubbs started well, landing several lefts to Tyson's head, which Tyson matched with blows and upper cuts to Tubbs's body. Both men frequently resorted to clinches.

At the end of the round, one judge scored it 10-9 for Tubbs, one 10-9 for Tyson, and the third 10-10.

But in the second round, Tyson's youth, speed and stamina began to show to their best advantage against Tubbs, who at 108 kg was some three kg above his own fight target of 105 kg.

Tubbs scored some blows at the beginning of the round, but then Tyson came in with a flurry of punches including upper-cuts to the body and a left hook to the head.

The weary Tubbs stumbled to a neutral corner, then fell, bleeding from a cut above his right eye.

Two minutes and 54 seconds into the second round, Tubbs's trainer, O'Del Hadley, jumped into the ring and threw in the towel.

later and left the ring under his own power, his white red-trimmed trunks spattered with blood.

Asked to describe the impact of fellow-American Tubbs's punches, Tyson said dismissively: "none whatsoever."

Kifco outclass Starlite to win Gulf Air Trophy

Aqeel (right) receives the trophy from Saleh Al Kindy.

KIFCO beat Starlite comprehensively to avenge an earlier defeat and also clinch the Gulf Air Cricket Trophy at the KCL ground on Friday.

Kifco opted to bat first after winning the toss and opened their innings through Nasir and Tariq Anjum. The openers gave a good start to Kifco with Tariq dominating the stand as 72 runs were put on for the first wicket. Tariq hit 61 off only 44 balls.

Added

Azam lost his wicket for 18 with the score at 108 but Shahid Pervez and Nasir added 55 runs for the third wicket before the latter was out for 48. Shahid kept his end intact and the runs kept flowing from his bat but he was unfortunate to miss his century when he was out for 90. Kifco went on to score 277.

For Starlite, Sohail, Zia, Ilyas and Arshad took two wickets each.

Starlite met an early setback when they lost their first two wickets with the score only 36. Arif hit 69 but with his dismissal the wickets started falling at regular intervals and Starlite were all out for 219.

For Kifco, skipper Aqeel Ashraf was the most successful bowler with three wickets for 22 while Mansoor Khan, Shahzad, Azam, Maqsood and Shahid Pervez chipped in with a wicket each.

Saleh Al Kindy, the Gulf Air general manager for Kuwait, gave away the prizes. Shahid Pervez took the Man of the Match award.

YMCA outlast YBCC

YMCA scored a 28-run victory over Young Brothers Cricket Club (YBCC) in a challenge match at the Yarmouk Cricket Ground on Friday.

Batting first, YMCA scored 135 for the loss of eight wickets in their 23 overs. Ibrar was the top scorer for his team with 43. The other batsmen to reach the double figures were Rafiq 30, Parker with an unbeaten 16 and Satyen 12.

For YBCC, Nadeem took two wickets for 34, Donald two for 18, Aul two for 34 and Azal two for 19.

December.

All are part of a package worth $26.5 million for six defences. The Tubbs fight was the second in that series.

Asked about plans after that, Tyson said, "I'll be 22 then. I might still want to fight."

Although the fight was sponsored by the WBA and World Boxing Council (WBC), it was not sanctioned by the International Boxing Federation (IBF). The IBF is not recognised by Japan's boxing authorities.

IBF officials had said they would strip their title from Tyson if he did not wear their belt into the ring.

Threat

Tyson's managers doubted the IBF would carry out the threat. Tyson said: "If it is stripped, I'll win it back."

Tyson now has 34 victories in as many professional fights, 30 by knockouts.

Tubbs, who did not meet the press after the bout, has 23 wins in 25 fights.

His sister, Rhonda Tubbs, told Reuters he was not seriously hurt and had wanted to continue the match, but that trainer Hadley felt the fight should stop.

Despite some complaints by the Tubbs camp in past days over financial and other aspects of its treatment, she said no protests were planned.

Tubbs's lawyer Curtis Crawford told Reuters ahead of the fight that Tubbs would get a $50,000 bonus promised for his being in good shape and said the Tubbs camp was satisfied with the compensation thus far for expenses.

Johnsen finishes on top

HOLMENKOLLEN, Norway, March 21. (AP) Olympic silver medalist Erik Johnsen of Norway and compatriot Ole Gunnar Fidjestøl, the world ski flying champion, mastered snow, wind and fog yesterday to finish 1-2 in the 90-metre World Cup ski jumping competition.

It was Norway's first double in the Holmenkollen Hill since 1979 and its first victory since Steinar Bratton won in 1983.

Johnsen's jumps of 97 and 105.5 metres were the longest in both rounds of jumps and gave him 217.2 points.

Placed

Runner-up Fidjestøl had 202.0 points for 94.5-metre and 103-metre jumps.

Guenter Stranner of Austria, with jumps of 90 and 102 metres, placed third with 194.3 points.

Ladislav Dluhos of Czechoslovakia came fourth with 192.9 points. He jumped 89 metres in the first round to be preliminary 14th. But he added the second longest jump of the day with 104.5 metres in the second round.

Thomas Klausner of West Germany placed fifth with 190.9 points for jumps of 91.5 and 102 metres.

Andi Felder of Austria, who won last year, barely qualified for the second round for the 50 best first-round jumps. Felder jumped 84 and 86 metres.

Triple Olympic champion Matti Nykanen of Finland, who has clinched the world cup title, placed 17th with two mediocre jumps.

Other Norwegian jumpers, who were familiar with the special jumping conditions in a hill known as "the cradle of ski jumping," also did well.

Vegard Opaas, last year's World Cup winner, placed sixth. Hroar Stjernen seventh and Jan Henrik Troen eighth.

Held

Heinz Kuttin of Austria, the world junior champion, placed ninth with 188 points on jumps of 91.5 and 98 metres. He held fourth place after the first round but dropped five places in the second.

Casuals edge past NBK in friendly

CASUALS warmed up to a tough finale to their season by just edging NBK in an exciting friendly at Alhadi on Friday.

NBK won the toss and Shabbir (11) and Ejaz (23) soon found trouble from the pace attack of Snowdon and Anderson, who respectively claimed their wickets.

However, Andrew Pinho (61) and Sai (33) began hitting the ball all over the ground until Pinho was brilliantly caught by Anderson off the bowling of Stafford. Ashfaq (18) began to look at ease until Bond took a spectacular catch off a long hop from Clements.

Just as NBK seemed set to launch a final onslaught they were beguiled by the spin of Wells, who clean bowled Miraj and then had Thomas stumped. Downick also weighed in with two wickets to leave NBK with 185 runs from 30 overs.

Fast

In reply, Casuals chose to open with Lewis (23) and Akram (28) who started the innings on a fast note. Earnest Harry (8) shone briefly and kept the pace of the innings up.

The required rate dropped when Clements (22) found it hard to make contact but Dorwick (36) and then Bond (19) pushed the score along. Things were finally balanced when Anderson entered the fray but a quick-fire 34 more than made up for his bowling and pushed Casuals to victory.

Skipper chose not to bat but commended NBK for a most sporting game.

Celtics rout Bulls for playoff berth

BOSTON, March 21. (AP) Larry Bird scored 33 points and Boston's defense contained Michael Jordan as the Celtics defeated the Chicago Bulls 137-107 yesterday, clinching a National Basketball Association playoff berth.

Jordan, who scored 50 points in a 113-103 Chicago victory over Boston Friday night, had 26 in the rematch. With the Bulls leading 77-75, he went to the bench after picking up his fourth foul midway through the third period.

The Celtics built a 95-85 lead by the end of the quarter. Boston's final 30-point margin was accomplished with a 42-point fourth quarter, only two less than the Bulls' total in the second half.

Kevin McHale scored 29 points and Robert Parish had 18 for Boston, which has won seven of its last eight games.

Pacers 102, Nets 96

Steve Stipanovich scored 10 of his 24 points in the fourth quarter and grabbed 10 rebounds as the Indiana Pacers survived a late New Jersey rally to beat the Nets 102-96.

The victory snapped a four-game road losing streak by the Pacers. New Jersey lost for the fifth time in its past six games under new coach Willis Reed.

The Pacers led by as many as 11 points midway through the fourth period, but the Nets cut the deficit to 91-86 with 2:22 remaining on a basket by Roy Hinson, who led the Nets with 22 points and 10 rebounds.

Stipanovich, who hit 10 of 12 shots from the field, responded with two straight baskets. After Hinson scored on a rebound, Stipanovich added another basket to make it 97-88 with 1:08 left.

Nuggets 106, Sonics 95

Michael Adams scored 27 points and Alex English had 22, leading Denver to a 108-95 victory over Seattle and clinching a playoff berth for the Nuggets.

Adams led the Nuggets in scoring for the third straight game and had a key 3-point basket with 4:09 left that opened a 94-89 lead. He has had a 3-pointer in 26 consecutive games, extending his own NBA record.

Denver trailed 83-82 when Seattle's Tom Chambers scored with 7:41 to play. The Nuggets then took the lead for good on a three-point play by T.R. Dunn, his only points of the game, at the 7:15 mark.

Dale Ellis led Seattle with 23 points and Xavier McDaniel had 21.

Prost beats Ferraris

IMOLA, Italy, March 21. (Reuters) Former world champion Alain Prost upstaged Ferrari pair Gerhard Berger and Michele Alboreto in pre-season Formula One testing at Imola at the weekend.

The Frenchman waited until the Australian and Italian had completed their sessions and left the circuit before taking out his McLaren.

Satisfied

Prost set a best lap of one minute 29.483 seconds compared to Berger's 1:29.907 — a time which had left the Ferrari team well satisfied.

Further testing was scheduled for today before the teams leave for Brazil and the opening round of the World Championship on April 3.

Mayotte and Sabatini upset in Players tourney

KEY BISCAYNE, Florida, March 21. (Reuters) Andrei Chesnokov of the Soviet Union upset Tim Mayotte and Argentina's Gabriela Sabatini was ousted by Mary Joe Fernandez in fourth round play yesterday at the $2.1 million International Players Championships.

Chesnokov, seeded 19th, beat the fourth seeded American, 6-0 6-7 6-2 4-6 6-3 and will face sixth seeded Frenchman Yannick Noah in the quarterfinals.

Noah easily defeated unseeded American Joey Rive 6-2 6-3 6-2 in another fourth round match.

Took

Sabatini, the third seed, lost to 16-year-old Fernandez, seeded 15th, 6-4 6-7 6-3.

"She did everything well," said Sabatini, who later celebrated a doubles victory with partner Steffi Graf of West Germany, which took her over $1 million mark in career earnings.

Chesnokov came out firing against Mayotte, winning the first eight games, before the American could find his rhythm.

The Russian missed a chance to serve out the second set when he led 5-4 in the tiebreaker with two serves to come.

But Mayotte stepped up his net attack, and won three consecutive points to take the set 7-6 as Chesnokov netted a forehand.

Chesnokov raced to a 3-0 lead in the third set, using his speed around the court to scoop up winners, and passing Mayotte with ease. Mayotte began to stay back and rally with the Russian who stayed ahead to take the third set 6-2.

The players traded frequent breaks of serve in the fourth set, but it was Mayotte who kept the edge. A couple of loose errors cost Chesnokov the set 6-4 as he hit a backhand long.

Games went on serve in the fifth, as both players hit hard from the baseline. Chesnokov missed three chances to break in the fourth game, but seized his chance in the eighth when Mayotte made a series of unforced errors.

Chesnokov missed his first match point in the ninth game when Mayotte hit an overhead winner. But he clinched victory 6-3 on the second match point when the American netted a backhand.

Graf easily defeated Britain's Jo Durie 6-1 6-2 while Czechoslovak Miloslav Mecir, the defending champion, moved into the fourth round.

The third-seeded Mecir overwhelmed American Dan Goldie, seeded 30th, 6-2 6-26-3 in a third-round match. Sweden's Mats Wilander, the top seed, overcame a slow start to eliminate Australian Mark Woodforde 7-6 6-2 6-1.

Move

American Chris Evert, seeded second, brushed aside compatriot Terry Phelps 6-1 6-4, while West Germany's Claudia Kohde-Kilsch, seeded sixth, ousted 13th-seeded Nathalie Tauziat of France 6-1 6-4 to move into the quarter-finals.

Other winners included 12th seeded Italian Raffaella Reggi with a 6-3 6-2 triumph over unseeded West German Claudia Porwik and unseeded American Aaron Krickstein, an upset victor over 26th-seeded Indian Ramesh Krishnan 6-2 2-6 6-3 3-6 7-5 in a hard-fought baseline duel.

IMRAN HIT FOR 76 RUNS OFF EIGHT OVERS

West Indies take Pakistan to task

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, March 21. (Reuters): A blistering opening stand of 112 in only 12 overs by stand-in skipper Gordon Greenidge and Phil Simmons presented the West Indies with a seven-wicket win over Pakistan in yesterday's fourth one-day cricket international.

West Indies reached what seemed a formidable target of 272 runs with 2.5 overs to spare and gained a 4-0 lead in the five-match series.

Brilliant

Greenidge's 66, scored off only 51 balls, was a memorable innings, which included seven fours and three sixes, all straight driven. He was at his brilliant best and in the sort of brutal mood which can make him quite impossible to dismiss.

Rarely can Pakistan captain Imran Khan have been hit for 52 off his opening six overs. He ultimately conceded 76 off eight and suffered the insult of being hit clean over the mid-wicket stand by Carlisle Best, deputising for the injured Desmond Haynes.

Greenidge was deservedly named Man of the Match, although Richie Richardson, with 79 not out, again played a substantial part in his side's victory with his third successive score of 70 or more in the series.

Greenidge: Man of the Match

Simmons contributed an aggressive 49 in 52 balls, including one enormous six off Abdul Qadir over long-on that cleared the stand and went into the car park beyond.

The only Pakistani bowlers who were able remotely to stem the run flow were Qadir and Hafiz Shahid, who took two for 56 in only his second one-day international.

Shahid, with an action not unlike paceman Malcolm Marshall, induced Greenidge to play on in his first over and Simmons to give a catch to wicket-keeper Salim Yousuf.

Pakistan's total of 271 for six, their highest-ever against the West Indies in a one-day international, was based on a fine opening partnership of 109 in 17 overs between Rameez Raja (71) and debutant Moinul Atiq (46).

Rameez's 67-ball innings was characterised by some classic straight driving. After hitting 10 fours and a six, he was caught by Greenidge at mid-wicket off Patrick Patterson, who later picked up the wickets of Javed Miandad (59) and Ejaz Ahmed (19), both caught in the deep.

But Javed handed out some heavy punishment to Patterson, hitting him for three sixes over the leg side boundary. The Jamaican was once again the most expensive West Indian bowler, conceding 77 off nine overs, although Winston Benjamin was severely dealt with by Rameez, conceding 31 in his first three overs.

W. Australia poised for victory

PERTH, Western Australia, March 21. (Reuters): Western Australia swing bowler Terry Alderman wrecked Queensland's second innings today to leave the home side poised for victory on the fourth day of the five-day Sheffield Shield cricket final.

Alderman took six for 91 off 28 overs as Queensland, seeking to win the Shield for the first time, collapsed to 216 in their second innings.

Western Australia, needing 162 in more than eight hours to win the Shield for the 11th time, were 71 for no wicket in their second innings at the close.

Queensland's hopes at the start of the day rested squarely with England all-rounder Ian Botham and former Test batsman Greg Ritchie.

Ritchie was soon out for 34 but Botham batted with great responsibility, scoring 54 off 141 deliveries in 183 minutes, before he was caught at first slip pushing forward to Alderman.

His innings had included seven boundaries and he had added 74 in 113 minutes for the sixth wicket with Trevor Hohns.

Nigeria knock Egypt out of Cup

RABAT, March 21. (Reuters): Nigeria's Green Eagles clinched the last Africa Nations Cup and eliminated defending champions Egypt by playing the Egyptians to a 0-0 draw to win Group B yesterday.

Nigeria, the surprise team of this year's competition, will meet Algeria who pipped Ivory Coast in a potluck draw to take second place in the tough Group A, played in Casablanca.

The game takes place in Rabat on Wednesday.

Travel

Cameroun's Indomitable Lions — who appear in the semifinals for the third time running after drawing 0-0 with Kenya in the first of yesterday's matches — travel to Casablanca to meet Group A winners Morocco, also on Wednesday.

After losing their first match against Cameroun, the Pharaohs needed to win against Nigeria to go through, but were unable to break down a solid defence despite a frantic last 15 minutes.

With the title slipping out of their grasp, Egypt besieged the Nigerian goal, but too often the final pass went astray.

As the game entered its last quarter, attacking full-back Ibrahim Hassan missed one of the best chances of the game. He picked up a loose ball in a packed penalty box, but missed the target by more than a metre.

Then with only five minutes to go, Hassan was again in the thick of the action. He broke out of defence on a long run down the left wing and sent over a good cross to create an amazing goal-mouth scramble.

defensive holes.

Seconds before the interval, Nigeria nearly took the lead when star striker Rashidi Yekini — who is being sought by a trio of top West German clubs — advanced out of midfield to line up a shot for Henry Nwosu from 25 metres.

The ball spun across the ground, but Shubair dived to his right to push it for a corner.

In the earlier game, Cameroun failed to impress and raised doubts over how they would deal with double World Cup finalists Algeria.

Lacking finishing power, a subdued side never really looked like scoring and were often in danger of a surprise defeat.

After the game, star goal keeper Joseph-Antoine Bell told reporters:

"We played very badly, but sometimes it is good to have a small match before a big one."

Egypt's elimination must leave a question mark over the future of British manager Mike Smith who was the target of fierce press criticism before the tournament began.

Smith was accused of introducing British-style 'long-ball' tactics alien to the Egyptian game.

Porto open gap at top

LISBON, March 21. (Reuters): Porto beat Setubal 1-0 in the Portuguese First Division yesterday to open up an eight-point lead over European Cup semifinalists Benfica who could only draw 1-1 against Chaves.

Porto midfielder Antonio Sousa scored with a 34th minute penalty, the home side's second of the match. Fernando Gomes had earlier seen his poorly-hit shot saved by Setubal's Hungarian goalkeeper Ferenc Meszaros.

With Porto all but sure of lifting the championship, Benfica now seem more concerned with European competition than domestic action and lapses in concentration allowed the visitors a lucky draw.

Amir meets Kuwait soccer team

HH the Amir with the visiting officials.

HH the Amir yesterday received the Minister of Social Affairs and Labour, Sheikh Nasser Mohammad Al Ahmed, who was accompanied by the president of the Kuwait Football Association, Sheikh Fahd Al Ahmed, and the Kuwaiti national football team which competed in the 9th Gulf Football Championship in Saudi Arabia last week.

The Amir advised the team members not to blame each other, but to look to the future with confidence.

The Amir directed the officials at the Ministry of Social Affairs and Labour and the Football Association to study the causes which led to Kuwait finishing only 5th in the tournament. The Amir told the officials to fulfil the aspirations of the Kuwaiti youth by restoring the standard of football that was prevalent in the past by ensuring the cooperation of all concerned.

Real gain revenge

MADRID, March 21. (Reuters): Spanish First Division leaders Real Madrid turned the tables on local rivals Atletico Madrid with a 3-1 trouncing yesterday.

The decisive away victory avenged the humiliating 4-0 home defeat by Atletico in November.

Encounters

Atletico striker Roberto Lopez Ufarte missed a first minute penalty then Portuguese international Paolo Futre was sent off in the second half after collecting his second yellow card for handling the ball.

Atletico have not won a match in six League games, scoring only once in their last five encounters. They now trail 11 points behind the League leaders in third place, with Real Sociedad in between.

Rafael Gordillo put Real ahead in the 22nd minute and 15 minutes later Spanish striker Emilio Butragueno beat two defenders before passing back for Mexican ace Hugo Sanchez to net his 24th League goal of the season.

Butragueno was rewarded with a goal after the interval and minutes later midfielder Enrique Setien replied for Atletico.

Real Sociedad, who trail Real Madrid by eight points with one game in hand, drew 1-1 at Real Mallorca. Mallorca striker Antonio Orejuela put Mallorca ahead in the second minute before Real Sociedad's Alberto Gorrioz equalised in the closing minutes.

The future of Barcelona coach Luis Aragones was thrown into doubt after his side was crushed 3-1 by Celta. For Barcelona, struggling halfway down the table, it was their first defeat at Celta's Vigo ground since the 1978-79 season.

Manuel Noly put Celta ahead in the ninth minute with a penalty, the first of four in the match. Noly gave Celta their second 15 minutes from time, also from a penalty.

Barcelona's Roberto Fernandez then missed a penalty but English international Gary Linaker made no mistake with his spot kick two minutes later.

Celta striker Camilo Casal put the result beyond doubt four minutes from time.

Gardner opens world title defence on favourite track

LONDON, March 21. (Reuters): Australian Wayne Gardner is raring to begin the defence of his first world motorcycle 500 cc title next Sunday on one of his favourite circuits, the Suzuka track in Japan.

"I like the Suzuka circuit and I've had plenty of success at the track," said Gardner who won seven Grand Prix last year. "I can't wait to get started again after the winter break."

With three-time world champion Freddie Spencer deciding to retire, Gardner — the first Australian to win the world crown — shoulders Honda's hopes virtually on his own.

Recurring problems from a wrist injury persuaded American Spencer, 26, to retire last week.

Competition

But Gardner, whose victory made him an overnight hero in Australia, faces plenty of competition from American Yamaha riders Randy Mamola and Eddie Lawson.

Lawson, the 1986 champion, is particularly keen to make up for the disappointment of being pushed into third place by Mamola by just one point in last year's final standings, despite winning the closing race in Buenos Aires.

But Lawson's mind will also be on keeping his place as top dog in Giacomo Agostini's Yamaha team. His new teammate, Belgum's Didier de Radigues, has ambitions of his own.

Spencer: retired last week

"I will not be second rider, that's not in my character," De Radigues said.

The racers were able to go ahead as normal with testing in February and early March after the International Motorcycling Federation (FIM) agreed to reschedule the Brazilian and Argentine Grand Prix which had originally been intended to open the season.

Plans to hold the two races on March 6 and March 13, earlier than the season usually starts, prompted threats of a boycott from the major teams and the FIM moved the events to September.

After Japan, April sees the American and Spanish Grand Prix with the Portuguese event, again being held in neighbouring Spain because of the poor condition of the Estoril circuit, following on May 1.

Sweden and England in semifinals

PARIS, March 21. (Reuters): Holders Sweden, England, the Soviet Union and Hungary reached the semifinals of the men's team competition at the European Table Tennis Championships today.

Sweden, bidding for their ninth men's team title, completed their fifth straight Group B victory with a lightning 3-0 demolition of Poland.

England also maintained their 100 per cent record in Group B when they beat Yugoslavia 5-1 after number one Desmond Douglas had lost the opening match against Zoran Primorac.

Hungary, who have won the trophy four times, defeated Bulgaria 5-3 and nearest challengers Yugoslavia succumbed to England.

Hungary surrendered the women's team title they won in Prague in 1986 when they crashed to a 3-0 defeat against Czechoslovakia, who qualified for the last four as a result.

Csilla Batorfi, Hungary's defending European singles champion, was beaten by Marie Hrachova 21-17 21-14 and also lost the doubles with Edit Urban against Hrachova and Renata Kasalova.

The rot began yesterday when the Hungarians were whitewashed by the Netherlands, who gained their semifinals place after beating Poland 3-0 in their final Group B match.

The Dutch took the second place in the group behind Czechoslovakia, who topped the pool because they won their earlier encounter with the Netherlands. Each suffered one defeat in the group.

Successful The Soviet Union, beaten by Hungary in the 1986 final, completed their fifth successive victory with a 3-1 success over West Germany to emerge the only undefeated women's team.

They were talking on the Netherlands, while Czechoslovakia faced Yugoslavia, who beat England 3-0 to book second place behind the Soviet Union in Group A.
